LODGE WORKING FOR "THE INTERESTS," SAYS WALKER

Speaker Joseph Walker in a statement to-day says:

The real issue is whether the treaty shall be ratified or whether it shall be killed by amendments. The treaty, which means much to the future relations between Canada and the United States, is being fought by great selfish interests by fair means and by foul.

These interests have decided to kill the bill by amendments, some designed to set the two Houses of Congress at variance and some designed to compel the reopening of negotiations with Canada. The Root amendment is typical of the former, and the Lodge amendment is typical of the latter.

Mr. Lodge knows that the House will not accept the Root amendment. He wrote me that the Democrats would oppose it. It is, therefore, a dangerous amendment, which may cause the whole treaty to fall between the Houses.

Mr. Taft will not stand for it. By supporting it, Mr. Lodge places himself in antagonism to the President in this crisis when the President most needs his support.

ARRAIGN BATHTUB PRISONER

Twenty-five witnesses gathered in the New York Tombs Police Court to-day, legal wire dispatches from there say, to hear evidence with which the police hope to convict Henry A. Scheib on the charge of murdering his wife, formerly Lillian G. Brady of Springfield, and then tried to destroy the traces of the crime by placing her body in a bathtub partly filled with acid.

At the same time, the grand jury began an investigation into the case following the determination of District Attorney Whitman and Deputy Commissioner Coughlin to keep Scheib in custody until suspicious circumstances in connection with his wife's death have been cleared up.

Coroner's Physician Lehane, who performed the autopsy on Mrs. Scheib's body, was the first witness called. His cross-examination was not completed at the previous hearing.

The police placed their greatest hope in Professor Larkin of Columbia University, who has made an analysis of the fluid in which the body was found and of the viscera that was destroyed. The chemist may find traces of poison.

Defence Is Confident.

Before Scheib was arraigned Police Commissioner Dougherty said:

"I won't say that we feel cocksure, for nobody can be certain in a matter of this kind, but we are confident of the case and put a crimp in the defence. And I can't dictate the nature of it—to do so would disclose my hand. But I'm not worrying about Scheib's future career.

"We haven't anybody that saw him murder his wife, and we haven't made sure, for publication at least, just how the crime was committed. But we feel we will prove the commission of a crime, and we don't doubt our ability to determine the culprit. It's simply a matter of time with us."

On the other hand Scheib's lawyers are confident that he will be acquitted.

Hope to Free Client.

"Well him free before nightfall to-morrow," said Alexander Karlin. "There's not a shred of evidence on which to predicate a crime, and without that they can't deprive any man of his liberty. It doesn't matter what Scheib may have said or what contradictions may be pointed out in his statements about himself. Those things don't establish that the husband died in that bathtub was there as the result of any crime."

Scheib's own story of his life, including

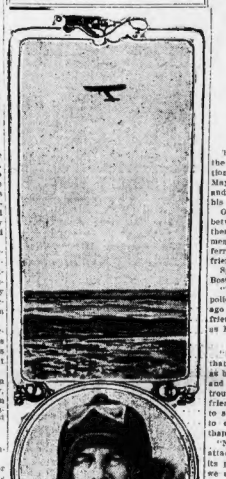
AVIATOR BAGUE AND ONE OF HIS OVER-SEA FLIGHTS



AVIATOR LOST ON SEA VOYAGE

NICE, June 6.—It is considered almost certain to-day that Lieutenant Bague, the French aviator, has met the fate of Cecil Grace, the Englishman, who was lost in the North Sea while attempting a flight from Calais to Dover last December.

Lieutenant Bague, who holds the over-sea flight record, left Nice on his aeroplane yesterday for a trip to Corsica. The distance between the two points is a little more than 100 miles, and when nothing was heard from the daring aviator torpedo boat destroyers were sent out to search for him. Six craft returned to-day, having found no trace of Bague.

The aviator took carrier pigeons with him, and it is supposed that the aeroplane capsized so suddenly that he was unable to get them loose. The Aviator left again for Corsica to make a further hunt for the missing aviator by means of searchlights.

On March 5 last Lieutenant Bague made a sensational and daring flight over the Mediterranean from Antibes to the little island of Gorgonal, off the Italian coast. He covered a distance of more than 200 kilometers (124.3 miles), establishing a new record for a flight over the sea.

CANON HIGGINS SAILS HOME ON CYMRIC

The White Star liner Cymric sails at 6 o'clock this afternoon with 125 saloon passengers and more than 500 in the steerage.

Among the saloon passengers will be Canon Gilbert Higgins of London, who has been visiting the United States and has preached in many of the Catholic churches in this city.

General A. W. Greeley of Arctic fame will go aboard for the Summer.

Mr. Rev. R. F. Hurley of Portland, Rev. James Lee of Revere, Rev. and Mrs. Samuel Snelling of West Roxbury, Mrs. James Jackson of Boston and Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Scadding of Toronto are among the first cabin travelers.

Kate Gallagher, aged twenty-five, a native of Ireland, is deported on the Cymric because she failed to pass the physical tests of the immigration doctors. The young woman was found to be suffering from a rare disease known as "grave."

MAYOR'S HOTEL "JOKE"

The thirty-second annual convention of the Hotel Men's Mutual Benefit Association opened to-day at the Hotel Brunswick, Mayor Fitzgerald welcoming the delegates and taking the opportunity to lightly tap his friend, Police Commissioner O'Meara.

On account of recent stories of warfare between the Mayor and Governor Foss, there was interest among the local hotel men present when Mayor Fitzgerald referred to the Governor as "a very dear friend of mine."

Speaking of the police conditions in Boston, Mayor Fitzgerald said:

"You will find here in Boston that our police force is run by the State. A week ago the Governor—who is a very dear friend of mine—appointed a Republican as Police Commissioner.

Put Up to Treadway.

"In the morning papers to-day I see that the Commissioner refers to this force as being 100 per cent. perfect in discipline and efficiency. So if you do get into trouble while you are in Boston, my friend Allan T. Treadway here is the man to see. He and North Adams have more to do with the police force of Boston than I have.

"Now," said the Mayor, turning from his attack on Boston's lack of home rule for its police, "we have a fine city here and we are going to have a finer one as time goes on. Right in Copley square here a $4,000,000 hotel is being built. There is a whisper that a new one is to be built in Arlington street and rumors of a third one contemplated at Tremont and Boylston streets."

Hotel Men Get Busy.

Then the convention, with its 500 delegates, representing hotel men in all parts of the United States, settled down to business. President J. S. Mitchell of Los Angeles reported that the association has gained 201 members during the past year, and Secretary J. K. Blatchfield of Chicago told of the prosperous financial condition of the organization.

This afternoon the members, delegates and their wives and families visited the State House, where they were welcomed by Governor Foss. To-night at the Hotel Somerset comes the big annual banquet. The convention comes to an end Friday evening.

The annual election of officers was held to-day and resulted as follows:

President, J. Linfield Damon, Jr., of the Hotel Thorndike, Boston; vice-president, W. H. Marshall of Jacksonville, Fla.; secretary and treasurer, J. K. Blatchfield of Chicago, re-elected. The board of directors was re-elected. This board will decide whether to hold next year's convention in Jacksonville, Fla., or at Atlantic City, the two cities which have invited the hotel men.

Loving cups were presented to-day by the retiring president, J. T. Mitchell, to the two men who obtained the largest number of members during the past year. The first prize was won by H. N. Dutton of Atlanta, Ga., who got twenty-two new members, the second prize went to W. H. Marshall of Jacksonville, who got twenty-one, and honorable mention was given to Charles D. Hurd of Los Angeles, who got twenty new members.

There is a plan proposed by William W. Davis of Riverbank court, Cambridge, to hold the 1913 convention in Europe.

SALEM D. CHARLES TO MARRY TEACHER

Salem D. Charles, the "King of City Hall Bachelors," is to be married on July 15 next. When the announcement of the coming marriage of the former chairman of the Board of Street Commissioners to Miss Adeline M. Kinsel, of New Bingid was published City Hall to-day, there was excitement.

The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride. Miss Kinsel is a high school teacher in New Ringold.

Mr. Charles is well known politically, and as an expert hunter and an angler. It is expected that ex-Congressman John R. Thayer of Worcester, a close friend of Mr. Charles and fellow sportsman of Mr. Charles, will be best man.

CRAPO IN COURT IN ACID CASE

William H. Crapo, proprietor of a lodging house at No. 574 Massachusetts avenue, was taken to the East Dedham street police station to-day on a warrant charging him with throwing sulphuric acid on two wealthy Harvard students, members of a quartette of "Gold Coasters," who came to the house early Sunday morning to ask girls lodging there to go auto riding.

This is the first time, so far as known, that Harvard collegians have figured in a case of acid throwing, though they have figured in most every kind of an escapade known to irrepressible youth. This is one of the rare instances, too, in which the collegians are the complainants. Usually it is the other way around.

Gold Coast Men Complain.

The complainants in the case are Stoddard Hoffman of New York city and Donald Clarke, jr., of Holyoke. The two other members of the student quartette were Benjamin Hartt of Chicago and Charles Adsit of Chicago. Hoffman and Adsit are freshmen. Hartt and Clarke are sophomores. Hoffman roams at No. 5 Randolph hall. The other three reside in the Westmoreley. Both these dormitories are on the celebrated Harvard "Gold Coast," where wealth is indispensible.

The complainants are Clarke and Hoffman. Clarke is burned severely upon the face and neck. His eyes were saved only by the big glasses. Hoffman's coat was burned.

The girls whom the collegians wished to take auto riding lodged on the ground floor front. There, just by this room, they are the Misses Evelyn Ward, Lisette Gordon and Florence Kinnard.

To-day Mrs. Crapo, who runs the lodging house with her husband, gave the girls summary notice. She says she returned the advance rent for the week. The girls started out to seek other quarters.

Arranged to Call.

The four youths hired an auto from the Harvard Garage Saturday evening and went to Revere Beach. There, according to Hoffman's story to-day, they ran across Miss Ward and Miss Gordon, whom they had known some months. They asked the girls to go to Providence on a night ride. Hoffman says:

"Miss Ward agreed, but Miss Gordon said she could not go. We arranged to call at their house after midnight. Miss Ward said that if Miss Gordon would not go she would get some other girls."

The students came quite a point of this pre-arranged date, as proving that they were not trespassers when they came to the Crapo house later, but were there according to their agreement with Miss Ward.

Hoffman's story of the fracas at the boarding house is substantially as follows:

"We drove to within 100 yards of the house at 2 a. m. Sunday. I went up the steps and scratched on the window. While I was talking with Miss Ward at the window Crapo came to an upper window and told us to get out. We remonstrated that we were not disturbing anyone. He threatened to shoot. Miss Ward asked us to go back to return in an hour, when Crapo would be asleep. We came back at 4 a. m.

Went to Hospital.

"Clark went up the steps. I stood at the window. Clark scratched at the window. Crapo opened the door and threw acid on Clark from a cup. He threw acid on me at the same time. I screamed. Two men whom we didn't know, came running. One threw a brick through the door window. We went to the Relief Hospital, where Clark's burns were dressed. Then we went to the police station. The sergeant and two patrolmen there could see we had been drinking. We were not trespassers. We did not throw the brick."

The next day Clark and Hoffman engaged Joseph A. Pemilson as counsel and will prosecute Crapo.

Story of Girls.

Miss Evelyn Ward said to-day:

"I told the boys to be quiet, for our landlord has been very fussy. But the boys kept around the window and Mr. Crapo was aroused. He came out armed with a big club and told the boys to go away. We whispered to them to come back later. They came back. This time Crapo appeared with the acid or some such thing. I saw him start to throw it and we got back into the room, so I didn't actually see him throw it. I went to see the boys in court, and expect to go into court, which I have never done before in my life. I dread it."

SPEAKER WALKER, WHO AGAIN DEFIES SENATOR H. C. LODGE

JOSEPH WALKER.

TO FIGHT LONG LEASE FOR "L"

An attempt of the committee on transportation of the United Improvement Association to indorse the action of the "Big Four" commission and push through a vote in favor of a fifty-year lease of the subways and elevated structure by the Boston Elevated will be bitterly fought by members of the association who are opposed to the lease when the committee makes its report to the association to-morrow night.

The final meeting of the committee to frame its report will be held to-night. It was said by members to-day that an attempt would be made in committee to rush through an indorsement of the move which would turn over the entire rapid transit facilities of the City of Boston to the Boston Elevated for fifty years. Such a state of affairs will not be countenanced by members of the United Improvement Association, who have fought against the furling of the West End property to the Boston Elevated on a 999 year basis. The transportation committee of the United Improvement Association reported in favor of the merger of the West End and the Boston Elevated in the light of the proposition that the United Improvement Association favored the fifty year lease that this might be regarded in the light of favoring the approval of such a plan and the legislative committee might go ahead and report a bill favoring a fifty-year grab of the subways and elevated.

Make-Up of Committee.

The transportation committee of the United Improvement Association consists of: J. J. Leonard, chairman, and the following-named: Peter F. Tague, Frederick P. Fish, Andrews square; Dr. Francis P. Silver, Charlestown; Richard C. Kirby, East Boston; James H. Knowles, Revere; Parker P. Morris, Harvard; Roger Ernst, Jamaica Plain; Joseph C. O'Kane, Meeting House Hill; James I. Black, Mt. Hope; Joseph H. Eastman, West End; Frederick H. Hunter, West Roxbury; James Hain, Orient Heights; Arthur J. Trewther, Roslindale; J. Henry Neil, Roxbury; James H. Baldwin, Savin Hill; Stephen H. Burrell, South Boston.

LODGE'S STAND ON RECIPROCITY SPLITS G. O. P.

Joseph Walker of Brookline, Republican Speaker of the House of Representatives, returned to-day to his arraignment of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge on the reciprocity issue to say that the Republican party in Massachusetts has reached the "parting of the ways," and to declare his own intention to stand alone.

SAYS LODGE CONDEMNS HIMSELF.

Speaker Walker says he got his information about Senator Lodge's attitude with Taft stand of Senator Lodge in a letter from Lodge himself. He wrote me that he intended to support the Root amendment, Speaker Walker says, "and that he himself would offer the fisheries amendment. The enemies of Reciprocity, Mr. Walker says, plan to kill it by amendment.

The Speaker is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor. The Lodge machine has been quietly against him for some time. That he not only welcomes this opposition, but is out in the highway inviting it, appears from a paragraph in to-day's statement following Lodge's famous remark about Republican tariff revision.

Mr. Lodge wrote me, in reply to a question from me, that he has promised the President to support the treaty, but that he had made no agreement as to amendments. This reminds me of Mr. Lodge's statement of two years ago, to the effect that the Republicans promised to revise the tariff, but that they did not promise to revise it downward.

In bringing this quotation into the discussion the Speaker is believed to have committed the unpardonable sin of lese majeste. His statement of to-day is as follows:

Speaker Walker's Statement.

I do not intend to allow my letter to Mr. Lodge to be misunderstood nor the exact issue between us to be befogged.

I did not know my letter upon newspaper criticism of Mr. Lodge's attitude toward the reciprocity bill, but upon statements made directly to me over Mr. Lodge's own signature. He wrote me definitely that he intended to support the Root amendment and that he, himself, should offer the fisheries amendment.

Now the real issue is not the intrinsic merits of any particular amendment.

The real issue is whether the treaty shall be ratified or whether it shall be killed by amendments. The treaty, which means much to the future relations between Canada and the United States, is being fought by great selfish interests by fair means and by foul. These interests have decided to kill the bill by amendments, some designed to set the two Houses of Congress at variance and some designed to compel the reopening of negotiations with Canada. The Root amendment is typical of the former, and the Lodge amendment is typical of the latter.

Mr. Lodge knows that the House will not accept the Root amendment. He wrote me that the Democrats would oppose it. It is, therefore, a dangerous amendment, which may cause the whole treaty to fall between the Houses.

Mr. Lodge knows that the House will not accept the Root amendment. He wrote me that the Democrats would oppose it. It is therefore a dangerous amendment which may cause the whole treaty to fall between the Houses. Mr. Taft will not stand for it. By supporting it, Mr. Lodge places himself in antagonism to the President in this crisis when the President most needs his support.

Lodge False to State.

Moreover, by the very act of seeking any amendment Mr. Lodge would destroy the great influence which he might otherwise use in opposing hostile amendments offered by other statesmen. It is the attitude of a true friend of the treaty?

Mr. Lodge wrote me, in reply to a question from me, that he had promised the President to support the treaty, but that he had made no agreement as to amendments. This reminds me of Mr. Lodge's statement of two years ago, to the effect that the Republicans promised to revise the tariff, but that they did not promise to revise it downward.

Now, I have no personal hostility to Mr. Lodge, but I submit that his whole attitude in this matter renders necessary a protest in the interests of the State. If Mr. Lodge now decides not to offer the fisheries amendment or he decides to support Mr. Taft and not Mr. Root once, and not till then, will he represent the true sentiment of the citizens of Massachusetts and fulfil his pre-election pledges.

I have been intimately interested in Mr. Taft's program for a more reasonable and equitable tariff. I have consistently upheld his hands here in Massachusetts. President Taft's tariff board will then help in the Senate until the closing hours of the session, and then killed by a Democratic filibuster in the House. I do not wish to see the reciprocity treaty meet a similar fate.

Until now the Republican party in Massachusetts has not been divided. To-day it is at the parting of the ways. I am not willing to see the unity back of the President and his policies there or with it the success of the State, largely depends upon Mr. Lodge's ultimate attitude toward the Canadian reciprocity treaty. I, for one, love and admire our country, Massachusetts and Canada, and I intend to stand for his sane, progressive policies, if I stand alone.

(Signed) JOSEPH WALKER.

RED SOX GAME IS CALLED OFF

There was no ball game at the Huntington avenue grounds this afternoon. Rain and wet grounds moved President Taylor and Manager Donovan to decide on a postponement shortly after noon. The battle will be played next time the Browns come here.

The Sox wanted to play, because they counted on a victory over the cellar-dwellers and were anxious to get a better hold on the other contenders. Pitcher Foster was to have pitched, and probably will work tomorrow.

REFUTES CLAIM IN PLASS CASE

James W. Mitchell, local manager of the National Surety Company of New York, was the principal witness in the trial of Norman A. Plass, Boston lawyer, accused of theft of Traphagen, officers of the Redeemable Investment Company, on a charge of aiding the mails in a scheme to defraud, before Judge Dodge to-day.

Mitchell's testimony was in contradiction of some letters which have been put in and was to the effect that the officers of the Redeemable Investment Company were not bonded in his company to the extent of $500,000, as stated in these letters. His evidence tends to support the claim made by the government, that the statements in the letters were false.

The trial is being held in the United States District Court. George E. Ladd, chairman of Longmont, California, defendant, and three other California jurors from Plass he bought ten shares of Class B stock in the Redeemable Investment Company. In the talk Plass represented himself as a minister who had given up preaching in the gospel and was devoting his time to finding profitable investments for ministers and professional men not able to find them for themselves.

150 BUSINESS MEN ON GREAT MONTREAL TRIP TO SEE DOCK SYSTEM

They got away on time, all of the 150 business men who started at 8:30 a. m. today to Montreal to study the dock system of that city.

Solid citizens of Boston and of other cities in the State are in the party. They travel under the auspices of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange.

Most of the 150 were at the North Station in good season. First on hand were John J. Martin, president of the exchange, and Edward P. Shaw, ex-State Treasurer. They had to be prompt for they composed the committee of arrangements.

There was a vast deal of hustle and bustle and morning greetings before the entire party was safely stowed about its special train. The train is a dandy, five Pullman cars and a diner. It is one of the best that ever pulled out from the North Station.

Messrs. Smith and Shaw kept tabs and hurried every one aboard. Everyone participated a splendid trip and a valuable experience. Jolly greetings were exchanged. George E. Smith, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, received special welcome.

Eugene E. Smith, chairman of the Harbor and Land Commission, is an important member of the party, for docks are right in his line.

Senator Charles H. Brown of Medford, father of the $9,000,000 plan for the development of Boston harbor, was given a hearty greeting. The rapprochement between Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald over the opposite chimes in the bill became a subject of interested talk.

Other members of the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs besides Senator Brown were on hand to greet. Mayor Barry of Cambridge and a host of prominent business men from all over the State kept coming into the station and making for the Montreal special.

Mayor Fitzgerald plans to start to-night for Montreal to join the others. Governor Foss was going, but finds he is unable on account of the pressure of public affairs.

Wear the Montreal Seal.

Each member of the party wore a souvenir badge of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, bearing the seal of Montreal in honor of the Canadians. Each was also presented a decorated and illustrated booklet describing the many points of interest which will be passed en route and also in Montreal by officials of the Grand Trunk Railroad.

The train will stop at Lowell to take on Mayor Meehan and delegates from that city and also in Nashua, Manchester, N. H., and Concord, N. H., for men who will go from these cities. The run will be made over the Boston & Maine to White River Junction and thence over the tracks of the Central Vermont and Grand Trunk Railroads to Montreal. It is expected that the party will reach the Canadian city about 6 o'clock to-night.

Before reaching Montreal a delegation of Montreal business men will meet the party at St. Johns, Quebec, and extend the Boston representatives official welcome to Canadian soil. The party will then be escorted to the Place Viger Hotel where a banquet will be tendered them, after which as guests of the city the party will be taken on special cars to Dominion Park.

Wednesday morning the docks and other waterfront improvements will be inspected under the guidance of the Harbor Commissioners of Montreal. At noon as guests of the city again the party will take lunch on top of Mt. Royal. In the evening will take place the big banquet at the Place Viger Hotel at which many prominent Canadian officials and railroad and other business men will speak. There will also be addresses by President Martin of the Massachusetts Exchange, Mayor Fitzgerald, President Smith of the Chamber of Commerce, Senator Brown and other well known Boston men.

WOULD REJECT GARBAGE BIDS

Commissioner of Public Works Rourke is advised to throw out all the garbage bids recently submitted and requested to advertise for new proposals in a report of the Chamber of Commerce sent to the City Council to-day. The report is made by the committee on metropolitan affairs of the chamber and points out that the bids for the disposal of garbage were not based upon any official specifications. City ownership of the reduction plant and of the various collection stations is suggested as two features which the chamber believes should be incorporated in the contract.

RUSSIA NOT TO AID JEWS HERE

LONDON, June 6.—Herman Bernstein of New York, who has just returned from Russia, in an interview here to-day said: "On the highest authority I can say, after the meeting between United States Ambassador Rockhill, Count Witte and Finance Minister Kokovtzoff, there is absolutely no truth in the report that the Russian Government has made concessions to the United States concerning the passport question.

"The Russian government will do nothing for American Jews before the Jewish question is settled in Russia. The government will not be prepared to ameliorate the condition of the Jews for years," Count Witte said.

"The condition of the Jews is worse now than ever in the history of Russia."

VEDRINE SEEKS NEW AIR MARK

PARIS, June 6.—Pierre Vedrine, the French aviator who won the Paris to Madrid flight, to-day set out in the Paris to Turin air race to make a record-breaking journey to Rome and attempt to overtake the four other aviators who have preceded him over three-fourths of the course.

Vedrine left Dijon 3:35 a. m., arriving 3 hours and 50 minutes later at Dijon, having made the 150 intervening miles without accident. After eating his breakfast in Dijon and refilling the fuel tanks of his machine he made ready to start again.

A great crowd had welcomed Vedrine at Dijon, but a greater one saw him depart. At 8:45 Vedrine started in a southeasterly direction with the cheers of the people of Dijon ringing in his ears.

Vedrine said there was a chance of his making Rome by night.

How to Keep the Head Clean

Frequent washing with a shampoo composed of pure soap, cocoanut oil, glycerin, white of eggs and salicylic acid imparts a feeling of cleanliness and invigoration that is hard to describe. This opens up the pores leading to the hair roots, removes dandruff and scales, and puts the scalp in such a healthy condition that the loss of hair is naturally stopped.

Birt's Head Wash is made of the above ingredients. It contains no free alkali, as is the case with most soaps and shampoos.

It contains no alcohol, which is one of the principal ingredients in many so-called hair remedies. Free alkali is deadly in all its effects, and alcohol turns the hair gray.

Be on the safe side. Use Birt's Head Wash. The full formula is printed plainly on every tube. At all drug and department stores, 25c.

Sent by mail upon receipt of price by the Cuticura Chemical Co., New York.

BELLE BAIN GETS DIVORCE

NEWPORT, June 6.—Belle Beach Raine, professional horse show rider, and William C. Bean of Boer war fame, were granted a divorce in the Superior Court here to-day by Judge Stevens on the ground of neglect and disenjoyment.

Mrs. Bain took the stand and said she married Bain in Newport in December, 1906. She declared her husband was a persistent drinker and that liquor had lived apart since 1908, at which time Bain left her without cause. Mrs. Emily S. Beech, mother of the petitioner, also a horse show rider, testified that her daughter had supported herself and in fact that Bain had never contributed to his wife's support.

Mrs. Bain was stylishly arrayed in a dark cutaway coat, stand-up collar and white necktie and in a chic bobbie skirt, and was far from being cast down with sorrow.

MISS FULTON, ONLY CO-ED OF TECH CLASS '11

MISS MARGARET V. FULTON

254 DEGREES GIVEN AT TECH

With Huntington Hall, Rogers building, packed with 1,100 relatives and friends of the members of the class 1911 of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 254 degrees were conferred this afternoon by President Richard C. Maclaurin upon the graduating class 1911. The number of degrees conferred to-day exceeds by two the number granted last year.

The degrees of Doctor of Philosophy was conferred upon Eugene C. Howe, A. B. S., B. C. of Brooklyn. Howe's thesis was "A Biometric Investigation of Certain Non Sport Forms Intestinal Basilli."

The degrees of Doctor of Engineering were conferred upon Reginald Jones, S. B. M. S., of Los Angeles, Cal. His thesis was "The Effects of Heat and Magnetization on the Magnetic Properties of Iron."

Goto is a lieutenant in the Imperial Japanese navy and has seen active service in the Russo-Japanese war. During this conflict Goto was stationed on the flagship that participated in the battle of the Sea of Japan. Goto is a graduate of the Imperial Polytechnic Institute and Engineering College, Tokio.

There is one co-ed in the class, Margaret Fulton of Germantown, Pa., in the architectural course. She did not study for a degree this June. At the present time she is traveling in Italy.

CARDINAL STORY IS CONFIRMED

Cables from Rome to-day confirmed yesterday's story in the AMERICAN that the Pope will convoke a consistory, probably next December, at which as many as a dozen new cardinals will be selected, one or more of whom will be American.

A copyrighted dispatch to the New York World from Rome says that if only one American cardinal is selected that the choice will lie between Archbishop Farley of New York and Archbishop O'Connell of Boston.

As was pointed out in the AMERICAN yesterday, the precedence of age of the diocese is regarded when selecting cardinals, ordinarily, and if that is done in this case Boston would come before New York and Archbishop O'Connell would be selected in preference to Archbishop Farley.

The cabled dispatch to the World follows:

"Rome, June 5.—It is now certain that a consistory will be held at the close of the civil celebrations in Italy. Probably it will be convoked in December.

"It is felt necessary to fill ten or a dozen of the twenty-five vacancies in the College of Cardinals.

"Pope Pius intends to nominate one American cardinal. The inner trustworthy information is that his choice lies between Archbishop Farley of New York, Archbishop O'Connell of Boston, Archbishop Quigley of Chicago, and Mgr. Falconio, the Apostolic Delegate at Washington.

"The late Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia, it is believed at the Vatican, would have been nominated had he lived.

"Mgr. O'Connell has been exceedingly popular at the Vatican since the papal mission to Japan two years ago was conducted with tact, shrewdness and success.

"Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul was thought at one time likely to receive a red hat, but since he wrote that protest to the book of the famous convert, Father Hecker, his chances of promotion appear to have waned.

"Rector Kennedy of the American College at Rome is often mentioned as a candidate, but he is considered too young for the cardinalate."

SLEEP-WALKER HURT IN 52-FOOT FALL

While walking in his sleep, Thomas E. Kiley, a fireman, fell from a third story window at his home at No. 70 Harvard street, South End, early to-day, receiving a fracture of the right hip and a severe shaking up. He was taken to the City Hospital and is kept under observation, as it is feared he may also have sustained internal injuries.

Kiley is a somnabulist. It is thought he climbed through the window in his sleep and stepped off into space. He dropped a distance of thirty feet to the ground. His groans attracted several neighbors, who notified the police, and the injured man was hurried to the hospital in an ambulance. His condition is not dangerous and it is thought he will recover.

SEEKS PARDON ON HOGAN'S CONFESSION

John H. Chance, who has served thirteen years of a life sentence in Charlestown Prison, will have his petition for a pardon heard by Executive Council upon the recommendation of Governor Foss. Arthur Hogan, now in Chicago, who confesses that he committed the murder, may be the means of setting Chance at liberty.

He was indicted jointly with Hogan on a charge of killing Frank Russell, a clerk in the drug store of the United States Express Co. in the evening of April 4, 1898. Both men were alleged to have entered the store and to have shot Russell behind the counter as he was standing at the counter.

One of the men was followed and a coat was later found, Chance admitted that it was his. And upon this evidence he was convicted.

NINE KILLED WHEN WOMEN LEAD RIOT

MEXICO CITY, June 6.—A suffragist demonstration by women in Santa Julia, one of the poorest districts of Mexico City, resulted in a riot in which rioters had to fire into the crowd to save their own lives. Nine persons are known to have been killed.

When the women were joined by a large crowd of rif-raff and the parade became disorderly a company of rurales attempted to arrest a man guilty of stone throwing. Others attempted to take the man away. The rurales fired riddled one of the cars with their carbines and later fired one volley after they had been attacked.

SALEM ARTIST DIES ON A STREET CAR

Frank M. Paine, an artist, died suddenly to-day while riding on an electric car from his Summer residence at Salem Willows to Salem. Mrs. Paine and Ralph Hayward, a friend, were with Mr. Paine who was apparently in good health when he left home. Suddenly he became unconscious. Motorman John Flynn sent the car along at top speed while Conductor Ira Silsby Hospital, which is on the route. While being taken to the hospital Mr. Paine died. He was the son of the late Joseph H. and Julia Fulton Paine. Mrs. Paine is also an artist.

LOCKED AUTOS ARE DRIVEN INTO MARSH

Two automobiles locked wheels and drove through a fence eight feet high into a marsh while on the State boulevard in Revere. The machines were slightly damaged and the only injuries were a few cuts and bruises. No one was thrown through the glass and wind shield of his car, receiving a few cuts.

The accident occurred near the westerly end of Broadway. Guy H. Wingard, of Cliff avenue, Winthrop, accompanied by his wife, was driving his 30-horsepower machine toward Chelsea. Three chauffeurs in a 60-horsepower car were coming from behind and, in attempting to pass, locked wheels with the lighter car.

THE MANY HUNDREDS OF CASES OF TONSILITIS

in Boston could quickly be relieved if the sufferers could draw the intense inflammation that is in the throat to the outside. Dr. Teulon originated Rubefacient for this purpose, and in forty years' practice had many wonderful cures where deep-seated inflammation was the cause.

Rubefacient is prescribed by physicians and is in general use. If you know more about it, you would not be without it. It will sting and smart, but it works like lightning. It's sure. At all druggists, 50c, or send yourself on receipt of 50c. THE RUBEFACIENT CO., Newton Highlands, Mass.

CENTRAL COUNCIL PLAN FOR VINCENTIANS

Members Favor Move to Unify and Strengthen Work of Big Charity Organization.

Following a solemn high mass of requiem at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, the delegates to the national conference of St. Vincent de Paul societies took up the work of the second day's session in Lorimer Hall with Robert Briggs of Baltimore presiding and Dr. Joseph R. Lynch of Boston, as vice-chairman.

Before the session the members discussed informally the project outlined by Thomas Mulry, president of the superior council of New York, to centralize the work of the organization in this country by the establishment of a central council with headquarters in Washington and superior councils in every archdiocese in the country as headquarters for the parish councils. The general opinion is in favor of the plan, which probably will be adopted in the form of resolutions to be presented to the conference tomorrow by the committee on resolutions.

The general topic of the morning session was "Woman's Auxiliaries—Their Field in the Work," which was discussed by Chairman Briggs, while Dr. Lyons read a paper on "Women as Friendly Visitors." Chairman Briggs said in part:

"When we go into a home and find a man who drinks, but who does not curse, a woman who is shrewish, but who is not different; children who are dirty, ill mannered, indicted and improperly clothed, it does not require much strength of imagination to carry us back to the time when that man did not drink, when he was looking forward to a life of promise and hope, when the woman was young and attractive, and was reading the future through rose-colored glasses; and we naturally say: 'Why are conditions as we find them today? What chain of circumstances broke down the barriers of self-restraint in the man and made him a drunkard?' What tragedy made the young wife a peevish, irritable woman, old before her time?

Mere Aid Not Enough.

"Within the scope of these questions lies the living, pulsing life problem, and I do not hesitate to say that if we have no other conception of our work than to apply some temporary palliative—without looking back into the past of the family, or without a thought for its future, then it would be well for us to consider whether it would not be wise to step aside and turn the work over to more resourceful hands.

"Five years ago I took twenty families in our city of Baltimore, selected at random from typical conference cases, and in the course of an investigation covering a period of a year I worked out the life histories.

"In every case the man drank; in every case the woman was untidy; her home, called so only by courtesy, was dirty, the table piled high with dirty dishes, the floor covered with dirty worn matting and plentifully sprinkled with ashes, grease and refuse; the children in rags, their faces grimmed with dirt; but all of you have seen the reality of this picture and I need say no more.

"I have drawn this picture to show you that our work in the future must be along different lines and will embrace lines of activity in which the broad-minded, intelligent Catholic woman, and not the man, must be the guiding spirit. Every large city is full of work which you conference men do not touch.

"The work of the future will give to the wife and the mother a knowledge of foods and their values—a knowledge of cleanliness and order and ventilation—a knowledge of the care and training of children—a knowledge of all the diseases of children which may handicap them in the future; it will give to the children a knowledge of God, of their religion and of their social and civic duties; it will teach the sanctity of home—love one for the other, and will implant in our lives and in the lives of the poor a conception of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God."

Women as Visitors.

Dr. Lyons pointed out how women can aid the work of the society.

"It has been decided that women can not become either active or honorary members of a society of St. Vincent de Paul, but they may become subscribers or benefactresses, and in either capacity share in numerous indulgences."

"As subscribers or benefactresses, it is quite evident that the interest of women does not stop.

"It would seem that the women best adapted for the work of friendly visitors are those of some practical home experience, as the woman who supervises the affairs of her home, or the daughter who has a good idea of home management.

"Nothing to my mind seems more distressing at the present time than the work of some of our modern social service workers, who in many cases, carried away with a false enthusiasm in their work, and realizing less their sheer impossible results, think that nothing will so clarify conditions in the stricken home as the separation of parents and offspring; in other words, the breaking up of the home.

"We do not want visitors of that type to be identified with the work of the society, and fortunately we do not have them. What we want are visitors who will spare no effort for the preservation of the home. Her duties should be confined to the completion of the work started by the Conference, that the end result may be as nearly complete as possible."

In his address on the scope of the society, President Mulry of the New York Council said:

"While we render cheerful allegiance to the dictates of the Council General, among ourselves we are wofully lacking in unity. That is the one weak end to our present makeup. As this subject is to be made the matter for special discussion at this conference I will not enter into its details beyond briefly outlining some provisions of a proposed plan contemplated to relieve the situation and bring about a better understanding.

"The plan in preparation for some time and which will be submitted to you for ratification, calls for the establishment of a council in each Archdiocesan province of the country; in turn these councils will be subordinated to one upper or superior council composed of representatives from each Archdiocesan Council.

"This Upper or Superior Council, representing every section, will be the medium of communication with the Council General in Paris, thus establishing a centre of authority here, bringing all parts of the country into closer touch, and placing the jurisdiction of each section in the hands of men familiar with local conditions, and leading the officers of each province responsible for the propagation of the work within their own territory, all of which must inevitably go towards creating a healthy and friendly spirit of emulation.

"Personally I am of the opinion that the city of Washington is the logical head quarters for the society if the new plan be adopted."

Work Among Children.

Vice-chairman Hall spoke on "Special Works: Their Value as a Means of Perfecting Our Work in Homes of Dependent Families."

"The study of social questions from a specific standpoint," he said, "has become one of the characteristic features of our time, the good results of which were never more clearly demonstrated than in our charitable work of to-day.

"To make complete the work inaugurated by our visits to the homes, we must follow up the needs of the children by providing for their physical, mental and moral welfare in so far as they are affected by these conditions.

"To do this we have found it necessary to establish Boys' Clubs, fresh air outings in the country, and so on. If we do not do this work, our children will be drawn into institutions of a questionable character, which now exists in all our large cities, and our labors in the homes of these children will be fruitless.

"The making of good citizens is of far greater importance than the catching and imprisonment of criminals, and the conservation of the children is a new kind of saving and using in handling the increasing number of poor, sick, criminal and incompetent, is only a testimony of the fact that we would prevention rather than cure.

Society of St. Vincent de Paul, Its Scope and Its Purposes

DAVID F. TILLEY.

By DAVID F. TILLEY,
Acting President of the National Conference in session here.

Written Specially for the AMERICAN.

The Society of St. Vincent de Paul is a charitable organization pure and simple. There is no executive organization, and the only function of the society is to collect money and to distribute it in the ways best calculated to relieve suffering. Last year more than $200,000 was so collected and distributed. We have no salaried officers and our motto is, "For every dollar received, a dollar given."

The purpose of the society is the visitation and relief of privation in the homes of our people. The first rule laid on our members shows the scope of this work. It is, "No work of charity is foreign to this society." The result of this breadth of purpose is that the society is engaged to-day in every sort of social movement and social uplift. We maintain boys' clubs, placing-out bureaus to take children from hospitals and institutions and put them in good homes, convalescent homes for women and young girls just out of the hospital, fresh air homes for the children of the tenements, farms to which we can send people from the crowded districts of the city for a two or three weeks' rest, every conceivable sort of a charitable institution. We have committees constantly at work visiting the inmates of the jails and hospitals in every large city of the country, trying to carry a little cheer with them and to bring about a certain uplift in the atmosphere of the places.

We encourage all Catholics, especially the young men, to join. Any Catholic man is entitled to membership.

The organization of the society is not complicated. Every Catholic parish has its unit, called a conference. The priest of the parish is generally the spiritual adviser of the conference. But the rank and file of the Society is composed entirely of laymen. We have a membership now, in this country, of about 12,000.

The funds of the Society are raised almost entirely by voluntary contributions. There are meetings every week, and at these meetings a silent offering is made. In addition, in the large cities there are finance committees, collecting funds for the special work I have described above.

"A unified body of Catholic laymen, giving cheerfully of their means and of their lives to the best sort of charity"—that is the Society of St. Vincent de Paul.

Mrs. Joseph Stickney, Reported About to Wed Louis Bruguiere

Millionaire Waltham widow and her daughter. Mrs. Stickney is the heroine of London's "Coronation Romance," and society hears her engagement to wealthy Californian who has built a palace at Newport is a result.

Mrs. Joseph Stickney, who was formerly Miss Carolyn Foster of Waltham and who is worth millions, is the central figure in what is termed in London "the coronation romance." The first gossip that American society people hear on their arrival in London for the coronation is that the beautiful widow of the millionaire coal man is to wed Louis Bruguiere, the wealthy Californian, who has a magnificent estate at Newport, for which he has been looking for a bride to share.

Although confirmation of the report of their engagement cannot be gained at present, it is generally understood that it will be one of the announcements of coronation week. Mrs. Stickney's home at No. 20 Hartford street, Mayfair, Eng., is closed. It was learned there, however, that Mr. Bruguiere has been Mrs. Stickney's guest for an extended period, and that they have gone together to the country with a few friends to spend the Whitsuntide holidays.

Mrs. Stickney's gowns have been the sensation in court circles in England, and at a recent reception she appeared in a gown that was wonderfully beautiful. From the tips of her court plumes to the buckles in her white satin shoes she was ablaze with diamonds.

Often Seen in Public.

Before the fascinating Waltham girl and the Newport society leader departed with friends for the country to rest up before the coronation ceremonies they were constantly together at the theatres, the opera, the restaurants and at the Derby. Mrs. Stickney at these public affairs appeared to be devoted to her young escort.

If the dashing Mrs. Stickney does marry the young Californian, it will add another chapter in her already picturesque career. She was the daughter of B. B. Foster, at one time a member of the firm of Foster & Weeks, commission merchants on Clinton street, in this city. He was not wealthy, but he gave his daughter a fine education and she captivated Mr. Stickney, the coal "baron," by her beauty. From her modest little Waltham home to a Fifth avenue mansion in New York did not seem a long step for her, and she soon gained an entrance in to Newport and New York society.

Her romantic meeting with Mr. Stickney took place in the White Mountains, and when he died in New York in 1906, he left her, besides the Fifth avenue mansion, an enormous tract of Bretton Woods land and $2,500,000 cash. Her fortune is probably $10,000,000. About a year after her husband's death she made a trip around the world, and her greatest social conquest was her presentation to the royal family of Japan, at an important garden party at Yokio, where she was the guest of honor.

SOCIOLOGISTS GATHERING HERE

Sociologists, economists and charity workers and penologists from all over the country are flocking to Boston for the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, which opens in Tremont Temple to-morrow evening. The one address at the conference which is awaited with more than usual interest is that of Louis D. Brandeis, whose report on "workmen's compensation" is expected to be the most complete study of the subject ever presented.

Because of the pending measures on the same subject now before the Legislature, Mr. Brandeis's report will be closely followed by all the members of the conference.

To-morrow evening Homer Folks of New York city will make the opening address of the thirty-eighth national conference. Mr. Folks as president of the conference will set the keynote of the week's discussion, and has chosen as his subject "Our Rate of Progress."

Noted Workers Here.

Prominent social workers, and from all over the country, are pouring into Boston by every train. Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, John M. Glenn, director of the Russell Sage Foundation; Dr. Edward T. Devine, editor of The Survey; Mrs. Florence Kelley, secretary of the National Consumers' League; Jacob A. Riis of New York; Dr. George W. Goler of the Rochester Health Bureau; Hon. James A. Collins of the Indianapolis City Court; Rabbi Stephen A. Wise of New York; Rev. Washington Gladden of Columbus, O., and Dr. William S. Friedman of the Colorado State Board of Charities and Corrections are some of the prominent speakers from other States.

Mrs. Florence Kelley is chairman of the committee on standards of living and labor, and will make a report for the committee favoring the establishment of State minimum wage boards. This is unprecedented, but it is, the committee feels, entirely consistent with the gradual awakening of the community to the needs of labor.

John Mitchell, formerly president of the Miners' Union, will speak on the prevalence of drunkenness and possible remedies.

Will Welcome Conference.

Addresses of welcome will be made at the opening meeting by Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald, and Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard (other prominent Bostonians who will address the conference during the week are: Joseph Lee, president of the Playground Association of America; Dr. Richard C. Cabot of the Massachusetts General Hospital; Professor C. W. Dotes of the Institute of Technology; Miss Alice L. Higgins of the Associated Charities, Dr. Jeffrey R. Brackett, director of the Boston School for Social Workers, and many others.

The subjects of the days' conferences and of the individual addresses are suggestive in the fact that they deal with the hopeful and remedial side of the problems they raise.

Standards of living and labor, housing, health and recreation, the church and social work, securing and training special workers, families and neighborhoods are some of the main topics.

In considering housing, health and recreation, Lawrence Veiller, secretary of the National Housing Association, will report for the committee on "American Housing Awakening." Seumas McManus on "Irish Story telling, a primitive instinct" and Jacob A. Riis will speak on "What bad housing means to a community."

ILL, KILLS HIMSELF.

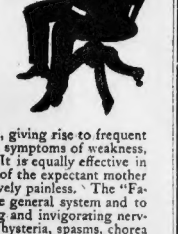
Quickly Removes Hairs Without Slightest Pain

(From Beauty Secrets.)

Persons having unsuccessfully tried to remove downy growths from the skin will be interested in a powder called delatone. Enough is mixed with water to form a paste and spread on the hairy surface. After two or three minutes it is removed and the skin washed.

The ease and quickness with which this method removes every trace of hair or fuzz is most pleasing, and though druggists charge a dollar an ounce for delatone, it is worth many times its cost because of the absence of pain when using it and the satisfactory results always following. Care should be exercised, however, to see that you get the genuine delatone and not an imitation.

Do You Open Your Mouth



Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine.

Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to INSIST upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and derangements, giving rise to frequent headache, backache, dragging-down pain or distress and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostation, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

It's foolish and often dangerous to experiment with new or but slightly tested medicines—sometimes urged upon the afflicted as "just as good" or better than "Favorite Prescription." The dishonest dealer sometimes insists that he knows what the proffered substitute is made of, but you don't and it is decidedly for your interest that you should know what you are taking into your stomach and system expecting it to act as a curative. To him its only a difference of profit. Therefore, insist on having Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only on a free copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages cloth-bound. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

Mrs. J. J. Donnelly says she saw Scheib and his wife quarrelling and that he struck her down in the street.

Scheib denies that a pawned wedding ring shown to him by the police was the one he gave his wife.

Little Eileen McCombie, six years old, has a picture and a doll that Mrs. Scheib gave her.

Scheib's lawyer in court to-day declares that the police have no evidence on which to hold the prisoner.

MANY WITNESSES BEFORE GRAND JURY IN BATHTUB DEATH MYSTERY.

By HENRY A. SCHEIB.

My name is Henry A. Scheib. I was born February 2, 1880. That is the reason I remember so well the time my wife lost her baby, as it was February 2 of this year and my birthday. That was the fourth time she had left me. The first time she remained away only three days and when she returned we were happy again. She remained away longer the second time and the third time, last June, she remained away until Fall. She never was a strong girl and sometimes was very ill. Our doctor, whose name my attorney has, and who will testify to the proper time, told me she had consumption, but I never believed it. She did not cough very often, and then it did not seem to me to be a consumptive cough.

Before I proceed with my story, I want to state my absolute innocence of any crime. I never harmed a hair of my wife's head. Indeed, I was deeply in love with her, and I am as much mystified as anyone as to how her body came to be in the bath tub in our flat. I have no theories, nor any way of accounting for it.

We were married on June 8, 1908, at St. Xavier's Church. My wife gave her name as O'Grady, which was my correct name, and I gave my name as Sherman.

Now I will explain how I came to change my name, and how my wife adopted the name of Lillian Lover, the name by which I first knew her.

I met her first in church on a Sunday morning. She was sitting in a pew just opposite me, and I saw the profile of her face. I took a fancy to her right away at first sight. I followed her, and when she entered around and I saw her full face, I knew I was in love. I had been in the habit of going to the church because I came from a musical family and am very fond of music. But there was an added attraction after I got the face of that girl she was in the same pew, and I sat opposite and admired her. She seemed devout and fascinating than ever. On the third Sunday, to my great delight, she came into the same pew with me and sat near me. She did not see this intentionally; it was a mere accident, I know, for she never looked in my direction.

The choir is seated so that we came to the altar together. We kneeled down at the same time. She did not see this intentionally; it was a mere accident, I know, for she never looked in my direction.

The choir is seated so that we came to prayers were said. She had no prayer book, and I offered to let her have mine on the next Sunday. She thanked me for it. That led to a conversation. We sat together in church after that and that Sunday after service.

We used to go to Central Park and the park seemed romantic.

She came from Springfield, Mass., she told me, and her name was O'Grady. Then she said she was like many another Irish girl with American ideas, and that she did not like the name of O'Grady.

She said: "An old educated Irishman told me that the name O'Grady translated into English was Lover and that there has been a feeling in the air by the wife of one who changed his name to Lover, and that he was the author of 'Shamus O'Brien,' the famous poem.

Changed Name to Suit Wife.

So she said, much she came to New York instead of calling herself by an Irish name she treated it into English and called herself Lillian Lover. Lillian being a contraction of Elizabeth. When I met her she was known as Lover and said she explained how she adopted the name I never saw the difference. That is how she came to call herself Lillian Lover. She translated it... A. S. to t... ring was not a wedding ring of the ordinary kind. It was very distinctive, inasmuch as it was very round with a flat surface coming next to the finger.

The change of my name from Scheib to Sherman was a caprice of my wife. It was not my plan at all, but grew out of the fact that she had changed her name. After we became well acquainted, and were taking walks in the park, Lillian raised what my first name was. I told her it was Harry. She made a little exclamation of disappointment and said she did not like the name because of a young man she once disliked very much whose name was Harry. She said, "I will call you Hughie, if you don't mind, just as a pet name. Then she said she did not like the name of Scheib, because it was too Dutch.

"Why don't you change it to an American name," she said, "just as I have done with mine. I don't like the idea of an Irish girl marrying a Dutchman. What is your name when translated into English?"

I told her; I understood it was something like a window pane.

"Oh horrors," she said, "that would give me a pain."

We were approaching General Sherman's statue, and she pointed to it, saying: "There is Sherman's statue. Why don't you take his name? Let me christen you Hughie A. Sherman."

"I said I didn't care what she called me so long as it pleased her. We had a good deal of fun about it, but from that time I was Hughie A. Sherman. That is all there is to the change of names. Lillian wrote to her folks that she was going to marry a man named Sherman, and she introduced me to her folks by that name.

I never had any serious trouble with my wife, only little quarrels such as any couple have. It is an absolute lie that I ever struck her or knocked her down.

She never owned a watch since we were married, at least. Unfortunately, I wasn't able to buy her the kind of watch she wanted, and that is wanted her to have. Therefore she wore none at all.

THIN BLOOD AND RHEUMATISM

Whatever Builds up the Blood During an Attack Will Cure the Disease.

This Ohio Woman Tried the Tonic Treatment After Being Crippled by Rheumatism and Was Cured.

There is a great deal still to be learned about the cause of rheumatism but one fact now stands out prominently—the rapid thinning of the blood from the beginning of the attack. This may be one of the causes of the disease or one of its effects but it is known that anything which will build up the blood during an attack of rheumatism will cure the trouble. Such a remedy either attacks the cause of the rheumatism or counteracts this harmful effect and enables the system to throw it off. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills owe their curative effects to this action.

This treatment for rheumatism is well illustrated in the case of Mrs. E. C. Alspach, whose address is R. F. D. No. 1, Vanatta, Ohio. She says:

"I suffered for nine months from rheumatism in my right hand and arm and think it was partly caused by an injury. My hand was so crippled that I could not use it at all. I had a dull heavy pain in my right arm all the time and was in great misery. When I got up in the morning my arm would be numb and the pain would be so great that I would have to cry. There were sharp, shooting pains through my arm. I became very nervous and could scarcely dress myself.

"I did not see that the doctor's treatment was helping me and quit taking it. Through a friend I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I noticed in a few days that I was being benefited. I took the pills until I recovered the use of my hand and the rheumatism has never bothered me since.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured anæmia, chlorosis, sciatica, nervousness, after-affects of the grip and fevers, and neuralgia, owing to their blood-building property. Send today for our free booklet, "Diseases of the Blood."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

The crash was caused by a workman in the middle of the road who lurched under the automobile as the chauffeur swerved to avoid him. The workman was picked up dead. Mr. Beekman was taken to the American Hospital at Neuilly.

TAFT IN TREATY FIGHT TO END

WASHINGTON, June 6.—From now on the fight will be for reciprocity—nothing else.

This was the slogan from the White House upon the return of President Taft from Chicago. Convinced that the people are with him in the struggle, the President is determined to exert every honorable influence at his command to secure the passage of the pact by the Senate unamended.

"No amendment will be accepted; the Root amendment, the Lodge amendment, or any other," was the word he gave to Senator Stone of Missouri. And the fight will be along that line if it takes all Summer.

The representatives of the interests, posing as Senators, have been stung by the Chicago speech. It is evident that the heaven is at work. Lodge has rushed into print with an apology. The others are showing the first signs of distress by losing their tempers and crying, "You're another!"

With the exposure of the Lumber and Paper Trusts' influence behind the opposition and the explosion of the farmer fallacy, there is nothing left of the opposition but noise. This will soon pass away, and President Taft is now more convinced than ever that his fight for a reduced cost of living won.

There had been rumors that the President was unknown in his opposition to the Root amendment. Senator Stone forgot to-day's mistake and rushed out to say that he said after a conference with the President.

The President told me he was against the amendment proposed by Senator Root and would be against any proposed by any other Senator, whether a Democrat or a Republican.

Community of Interests.

Startling additional facts furnished to the President by Commissioner of Corporations Herbert Knox Smith show clearly that the Lumber Trust, in fighting reciprocity to protect its $15,000,000-dollar monopoly of standing timber, is not alone. There is a close community of interests between the Lumber and the Transportation Trusts; between these two and a great Land Trust; and between all these and the Metal Trust and the smelting interests which have been referred to heretofore as being also actively engaged in the plot to beat reciprocity.

President Taft had these intimate connections in view when he opened up the war on the Lumber Trust Saturday night. The facts are all before him in Commissioner Smith's report.

Dwelling upon the concentration of timber controlled in the hands of the Southern Pacific Railroad, the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company, the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and allied Hudnut interests, Commissioner Smith says:

Allied With Railroads.

"To timber concentration and to land concentration is added, in one most important remaining source of timber supply for the United States, new formidable possibilities of this combination in the Pacific Northwest, and elsewhere are of the gravest public importance.

"These three holdings together (that is to say, the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Weyerhaeuser interests) constitute 23.5 per cent, or nearly one-quarter, of all the privately owned timber in the five States of the Pacific Northwest, the most important remaining source of timber supply for the United States.

"The possibilities of power involved in such concentration of land ownership, irrespective of the timber, hardly require discussion. The control in one hand of the power in the absence of restrictive regulation is obvious. This danger, moreover, is greatly multiplied, because a few of the principal owners of this land also control dominating positions in railroad transportation over great sections of the country.

"The Commissioner of Corporations is only hinting at the possibilities. Let the lumber interests of the United States get together and see what an alliance between the Lumber Trust and one giant lumber concern own the bulk of the standing timber. Reciprocity by opening to the United States the timber supplies of the Canadian Northwest would broaden the combine over night. Reciprocity would strip the combine of the $1.50 tax on lumber imports and pull the teeth of the monopoly."

WONDERFUL SHAMPOO DESTROYS DANDRUFF

"At last we have a dependable remedy for hair and scalp troubles," writes Mae Martyn in the Los Angeles Press. "The problem of lifeless, streaky, unattractive hair and dandruff, itching scalps seems to be solved. I find these conditions disappear as if by magic by shampooing with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water.

"The rich, creamy lather of this shampoo removes every particle of dust and dandruff and when rinsed out, the hair dries quickly and evenly. This shampoo seems to invigorate and put new life into the hair and scalp. It makes the hair glossy, fluffy and easy to do up and keep looking nice. Canthrox is inexpensive and has the approval of every woman who uses it. It is good for both light and dark hair."

DES MOINES, Ia., June 6.—The first electing held in the United States with Canadian reciprocity as an issue has resulted in the defeat of the champion of the measure now before Congress. Returns from the Ninth Congressional district show to-day that W. R. Green (Republican) of Audubon has been elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Walter I. Smith, recently appointed a Federal judge. W. S. Cleveland (Democrat) favored reciprocity. Green opposed it.

Were Deaf—Now Hear

Remarkable Experience of Those Dead to the World of Sound With a New Treatment for Deafness That Is Wonderfully Efficient. A Multitude of Witnesses.

DISCHARGING EARS AND NOISES

Unable to get employment that she liked on account of being deaf, discharged and discouraged from repeated failures to gain relief from hospitals and specialists, Miss Mildred Burgess, who resides at 25 Pearl St., South Framingham, decided, after a long siege, to her mother's importunities and read the Osmo-Chemic advertisement, try for deafness. Regarding her experience she said to the writer: "For seventy years I have been deaf in my right ear. I could hear nothing with it. There was an offensive discharge and those terrible noises that almost drove me to distraction. My left ear failed gradually and I could see nothing better for total deafness. I was thoroughly discouraged, as everything seemed to fail that I tried for relief, and when I did not notice any improvement in the first few treatments I received from the Osmo-Chemic Physicians, would have discontinued them, only my mother insisted that I continue, and I am glad I did, for I was finally blessed by hearing. The Osmo-Chemic Physicians stopped the discharge and singing noises in my ears and I hear almost perfectly again."

WERE DEAF—NOW HEAR

Miss Frances Borrard, at No. 20 St. Cecils St., Boston, says: "I was almost totally deaf in my right ear. Ringing, buzzing noises annoyed me greatly. The Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me. And as a result the ringing, buzzing noises are gone from my ears, and I hear perfectly again in my right ear, which I thought was lost to me forever."

Mr. Jacob R. Seltzer, South Hanson, Mass., says: "I had been almost totally deaf in my left ear since 1905, in my right ear for the past four years. The Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me. Now I can hear a clock tick fifteen feet from me."

Mr. F. E. Burns, No. 4 Rock St., Roxbury, says: "I had been totally deaf in my right ear. The Osmo-Chemic Physicians cured me."

Miss Nellie M. Rowe, 25 Aberdeen Ave., Cambridge, says: "I was very deaf. I was treated by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians and I can hear again as well as I ever did."

Miss Ivy Nelson resides at No. 20 Coventry St., Waltham, and says: "I had been troubled with ringing ear noises and was 5 years old, with colds and enlarged tonsils, accompanies with deafness. I was operated upon and the tonsils and tonsils removed, but my catarrhal trouble was not any better than before. My ears had been successfully treated by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians, and as a result my cousin, Dagmar Kjelst of 1050 Tremont St., Boston, also was cured of Heart Disease. They advised me to go to them for treatment. I took their advice with the result that they have been cured. The Physicians cured me of catarrhal Bronchitis, and I hear as well as ever I did."

Miss Nellie Donovan, 18 High St., Roxbury, was deaf. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me my hearing has returned."

Mrs. Margaret Kimball, 121 Oliver St., Lisden: "I could not hear a sound in my left ear. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear a watch tick."

Mrs. Fannie Rexford, 15 Vancouver St., Boston: "I was deaf, could hear no sound and had head noises. The Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear and understand a lecturer."

Mrs. C. S. Barker, 236 Spring St., Medford, Mass., was practically deaf in both ears. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I hear perfectly again."

LAST DAYS—ONE MONTH FREE

The Osmo-Chemic Physicians, in order to demonstrate their skill to the cure of Deafness to the Wax Drum-ear, will give all patients who are deaf, who begin a course of treatment on or before June 12th, one month's treatment including all medicines ABSOLUTELY FREE. Call to-day. Hours 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily. Closed Sundays.

O'MEARA STARTS A SECOND TERM

Stephen O'Meara walked into his office in Pemberton square this morning for his second five-year term. The only incident marking the event of his reappointment was a large bunch of American Beauty roses on his desk, sent by friends. Mr. O'Meara may later fill the places of Superintendent William H. Pierce and Deputy Superintendent William B. Watts, both of whom are eligible for retirement in two years.

Commissioner O'Meara in a general order issued last night said:

"After five years of service as police commissioner for the city of Boston, and at the beginning of a second term, it is fitting that I should make a statement to the police department for the loyalty, integrity and intelligence with which its work is done. I said publicly when entering on the duties of the office that I knew that I was taking over a good police department, and that my modest hope was only to make it better. Perfection is not to be found in separate individuals, much less in large bodies of men. The public judges police departments and so much by their merits as by their defects. The great volume of good work which they do is taken for granted, as it should be, because it is for such work that they exist. It is to their faults, their frailties, their deficiencies, that the public eye is directed; and in the very nature of things it is free criticism of news, the people of each city are likely to attribute unreasonably to their own police department the faults, the failures and the deficiencies of all police departments.

"I am glad to be able to say that according to my judgment and information the Boston police department is free from faults of the most important kind which are common to the police departments of all other large cities of the United States, and even enter into the police administration of small or large places. We owe it to the people of Boston to give them better and better service as time goes on, and to that end I ask the loyal co-operation of every member of the department.

URGE DELAY ON COMPENSATION

Senator George Holden Tinkham of Boston, at a hearing before the legislative Committee on Judiciary today on the report of the Commission on Workmen's Compensation, urged the appointment by Governor Foss of a new commission which shall report to the Legislature next year. He said that in view of the fact that the present commission has reported three separate bills, the fundamental principles of which are in conflict with each other, "the Legislature has been left in hopeless confusion as to the proper course to pursue."

Today's hearing was the first of a string of three that are to be given by the Judiciary Committee on the last report of the Workmen's Compensation Commission, which was appointed by ex-Governor Draper last year. In that report are three distinct measures, and the Commission, by reason of differences of opinion, does not recommend any one.

Representative Amos T. Saunders of Clinton who is a member of the commission as well as chairman of the Judiciary Committee joins with Representative Parks of Fall River on one bill creating a scheme of insurance and forcing employers into it by taking away their defenses against damage suits. Chairman Lowell of the commission reports a redraft of the English act which has been declared unconstitutional by the New York Court of Appeals and Commissioner Alexander reports a contributory system.

"This being the end of the session, with many matters of importance yet to be acted upon, the result of any legislative action taken under these circumstances cannot be fair, sound or scientific," declared Senator Tinkham. "The result of any action thus taken might be as unfair and deplorable to the employe as to the employer.

"Commissioner upon the same subject has been created in Minnesota, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Ohio and Illinois, the reports of which will be available to a new commission.

NARRAGANSETT BARS GAMBLING

NARRAGANSETT PIER, June 6.—Various publicity and energetic work of the reform element have resulted in a sweeping victory for the five reform candidates for Town Council and the abolition of the gambling element.

The Boston AMERICAN particularly has published plain statements of the gambling conditions here, with names and places mentioned. The AMERICAN gave a page and a half broadside last Sunday which had a marked effect on the election.

Interest today focused on the West Kingston election, where the agents declared issue was the reappointment of Constable John H. Cross, the young Harvard man who last Summer broke up the fashionable Narragansett Club and secured indictments against William E. O'Dowd Arnold and T. J. McKenna of New York, the alleged proprietors.

Jesse Pomeroy's Letters to His Mother.

TEN-MILE SWIM ON THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER IN AUGUST

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

EDDIE MURPHY DID NOT DARE TO MEET ENGLISH MATT WELLS

JACK JOHNSON IN HIS NEW $2,900 "CORONATION OUTFIT"

Posed for a Boston American photographer.

Here is Johnson in his $140 dress suit, ready for an evening affair.

Johnson in his $135 paddock coat, as he will ride in Rotten Row.

Wearing his $125 Tuxedo suit, to dine at the English stag parties.

This is his $110 walking suit and his new $100 Panama hat which goes with it.

This white flannel suit cost him $90. It goes with the $100 Panama.

"Dese suttenly am some scenery," said Johnson, examining his new outfit.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Jack Johnson, the unbleached publicity champion of the world, is going to sail for London, to attend the coronation, as a first cabin passenger on the North German Lloyd Kronprinz Wilhelm.

He has engaged the chief engineers' room on the upper deck for which he paid $700.

Johnson's neighbor will be a German baron and not far away will be the room of a German prince. His fellow passengers will also include some of New York's 400.

Johnson's neighbor is the Baron Von Ende of San Francisco. The best room he was able to procure was that of the second engineer. Farther along on the upper deck is the suite of Prince Franz Von Zu Lichtenstein. He had to be content with the purser's room.

To-day the AMERICAN publishes exclusive photographs of Johnson in his latest and most striking garments, some forty or fifty suits, his "coronation outfit" and the rest of his big steamer trunks full as "mere knockabout duds."

A facsimile of the bill rendered Johnson for his new raiment and of the check he signed in payment are also given.

One of the most surprising features of the bill covered Johnson for his new outfit is the average cost per suit, which is well over the $100 mark. In fact, the lowest price paid for the pugilist for any one of the suits just delivered to him is $90, whereas many of them cost as high as $125. Johnson's total bill from one tailor for his coronation outfit is $2,900.

Likes American Clothes Best.

Here are the reasons given by the world's champion for getting his clothes from high-priced tailors here instead of low-priced London:

First—He thinks American tailoring is better than English, and that an American looks like a peddler in English clothing.

Second—He thinks the American modifications of the world's cuts, including points that seem best from London, and Paris, are the best in general effect for a "modest dresser."

Third—He thinks the joke is on England, because he can carry $3,000 worth of American clothes in there without paying a cent of duty, while it would cost him heavily to bring English clothes here.

Fourth—When he was in London before, playing the Clapham and Brixton music hall circuits, all the London vaudeville stars tried to find out the name of Johnson's tailor.

He is a patriotic American citizen and believes in spending the money he earned on this side, as far as possible, among the American people from whom he got it.

Sixth—He wants to set an example to rich Americans who go to Europe and buy their clothing, and that is why both Johnson and his wife have patronized tailors and modistes here in purchasing their coronation outfits.

Record High Price.

The wealthiest and best dressed men in the city, who can afford to have just what they want in the matter of clothing, irrespective of price, seldom pay more than $90 for a suit, except in the case of evening dress, which may legitimately run as high as $125.

It is understood in this case that Johnson expressed a desire to have everything that went into his "coronation clothes" of the very best. He wanted exclusive buttons, the very finest of silk twill linings, the best of everything in every stage of the building.

The tailors who built the clothing insist that the cost of each suit, owing to Johnson's exactions about details, is by no means excessive.

They say that it costs $20 more to build a suit for Johnson than for almost any other man, owing to his huge bulk and to his insistent demands that none but the most expensive materials be used.

At all events there are very few men in the United States, no matter what their wealth or social position, who find it necessary to sign a check for $2,900 to pay for one garnishment of personal wearing apparel.

"It's all very well to shout about the high price," said Johnson, "but ah'm used to payin' somethin' for being Jack Johnson. I'm bigger in bulk and harder to fit, makin's than some of the tailor's customers, so ah cayut ya'y well kick when Ah'm charged accordin'."

"Yes, sah, Ah told tha' the' tailor man to put the best he had into them clothes, and he sutn done it. Ah don't s'pose there's goin' to be any sweller kid than yoh's truly."

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 6.—Wild threats followed the scheduled eight-round bout between Tommy Gary of Chicago and Danny Goodman in the Southern A. C. arena, when police jumped through the ropes to restore order following the verdict of Referee Black, who declared the bout "no contest."

WELLS SCARES EDDIE MURPHY

Eddie Murphy, whose friends have touted him as a coming lightweight champion, did two things when he sidestepped Matt Wells. He disappointed the patrons of the Armory, who would like to have seen the match, and he demonstrated his intention to remain a fighter of local prominence only. Murphy says his reason for not taking the match is that he could not get into shape in ten days.

As far as the present management of the Armory is concerned, he will be given ten years to get into shape to bet another champion. Matchmakers at the Armory say Murphy has been given a chance to make good up against easy things, and now when he had a chance to make good against a real fighter, he quits cold. "No more Murphy for the Armory," is the edict that has gone forth.

The Armory A. A. had secured Wells's agreement to box Murphy at the next show, June 13, and when the match was put up to Murphy he refused to accept it, giving as his reason that he could not get into shape in ten days.

When it is taken into consideration that Wells boxed Leach Cross in New York four days after arriving in this country, and will not have any more time to prepare for the match than Murphy would, Murphy's excuse seems to bear out the fact that he does not want any of the English champion's game."

KLAUS LOOKING FOR MATCHES ON COAST

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 6.—Frank Klaus, the East Pittsburg middleweight, whom many ring experts look upon as the real champion of his class, arrived in Pittsburg this morning from the East. Klaus, in company with his manager, George Engel, and his stable mate, Frank Madole, is on his way to the Coast, where on June 14 Klaus meets Montana Jim Sullivan before the Oakland Club.

Klaus intends to force Thompson and Kelly into matches, and his manager is ready to post money to go at a side bet with any 158-pounder in the world. The bearcat is in great trim, has been taking the best of care of himself, and will surely make the western bugs sit up and take notice.

KID LEE AFTER BANTAM TITLE

By RILEY.

Kid Lee is back on the job, and just going for a scrap—Messrs. Walsh and Dunlap please notice.

Lee has just completed an extended tour through the West where he has been mixing up everything in sight.

The Kid has been resting up for a couple of weeks and is anxious to get back in action, particularly against the two mentioned above. The weight doesn't make a bit of difference to the kid. He says he will make 116 pounds for Walsh or Delmont, and to make the challenge better the little Chelsea scrapper has injected all the bantams to come across with some talk that sounds like a fight.

The Kid claims that he has improved 100 per cent since he went West and has seven good victories to his credit and has fought two draws with Young Earlebaum, who has fought the same number of draws with Jimmy Walsh.

He has victories over Young Abe Atell, Harry Keane, who is known around Denver as the Aspen Whirlwind, Kid Ito, Eario Puyer, Charley Dunn, in Central City, Colorado, Harry Lub and Pete Hayes.

SAILOR-NEWSBOY FIGHT AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., June 6.—It was naval night with the Perry A. C. and the main bout between Tommy Teague of the Battleship Michigan and Abe, the Newsboy, of New London, was Teague's in every particular. One of the preliminaries between Kid Lambert of Fort Adams and Eddie Doyle of the Naval Training Station was stopped in the first round because the men were not evenly matched.

The best bout of the evening was a six-round go between Willie Smith of the Naval Training Station and Jack O'Donnell of the Battleship Connecticut, this proving a very good drawing card.

LANGFORD-AMES BOUT MAY BE HELD AT A. A. A.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 6.—A ten-round bout is expected to be arranged between Sam Langford and Harry (Hod) Ames to be fought in Boston, if the latter defeats Joe Ford in their ten-round bout in this city Thursday.

TEN-MILE SWIM FOR $1,000 CUP

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—At a meeting of the athletic committee of the Missouri Athletic Club, it was decided to hold the fifth annual National A. A. U. ten-mile championship in the Mississippi River, August 10, the third Saturday in the month, instead of Labor Day, the first Monday in September, as has been the custom for the past four years. The reason for changing the date of the race is that for the past three years it has been either chilly or has rained on Labor Day.

The prize for the race will be the $1,000 silver cup which must be won three times by a swimmer from a club before that club can gain permanent possession of the trophy. This is a hard rule on the swimmer, as he only receives a special prize each year that he wins.

Dr. Bassett says that it is impossible to change the conditions for the competition, because the National A. A. U. will no longer allow a swimmer to accept a $1,000 cup, although Harry Handy, by his three victories, gained permanent possession of the $1,000 Busch trophy.

"Bud" Goodwin of the New York A. C. won the race last year by a narrow margin from McDermott, the young Chicago swimmer, who was a close second. It is not known whether Goodwin will enter this year, although it is hardly probable that he will, as he was displeased with the conditions attached to the big M. A. C. cup. McDermott will, therefore, be the favorite to win.

COLLEGE CREWS HARD AT WORK

The Harvard crews are having their last days of practice on the Charles this week before going to New London next Monday to put on finishing touches at Red Top for the races with Yale. Last week both the varsity and freshman crews had an easy time of it following their contests with Cornell. They took easy paddles on Tuesday and Friday, but rested the other four days.

Yesterday, however, the varsity eight was given the longest row of the season, covering close to fourteen miles in the afternoon. After leaving the boathouse the eight rowed upstream to the Stillman Infirmary, then turning, paddled down to the Union boathouse. From here it went upstream again, past Soldiers Field, as far as the Watertown Arsenal, this stretch of approximately eight miles being covered without stopping.

Coach Wray is evidently satisfied that he has the best possible combination in the varsity eight that he can procure in Cambridge, for no changes have been made in the boat since the tussle with Cornell, and there does not appear to be any prospect of a shift before the close of the season. The men all appear to be in fine shape and able to stand some good hard work during the training season at New London.

Rain and examinations seriously interfered with the first day's work of the Yale crews on the Thames. The "exams" kept the oarsmen busy yesterday, but Coach Kennedy expected to have had all the crews on the river for a short time had the rain not interfered.

The big dreadnaught in the quarters was the most popular spot about the ferry, and blankets were in demand when it came time to turn in.

RED SOX GAME WITH BROWNS CALLED OFF

By R. W. LARDNER.

The game scheduled for to-day between the Red Sox and the St. Louis Browns was called off shortly after noon on account of rain and wet grounds. It will be played as part of a double-header on July 29, when the St. Louis club comes here again.

Jesse Tayler and Manager Donovan were anxious to ship as long as possible, for they confident the Speed Boys could measure of Bobby Wallace's thus strengthen their hold on place. But they were informed by the ground-keeper at noon that it would be next to impossible to get the yard in shape even if the rain should decide to quit.

The Browns got in early this morning from New York and spent a day of rest at the Copley Square Hotel. Manager Wallace intended to use Rodney Petty this afternoon and the veteran right hander will probably work to-morrow. His opponent is likely to be Ray Collins.

Great Chance for Red Sox.

To the fans gamest there will now be played with Bobby Wallace's crew of ball tossers, who are holding the same position in the American League as our Nustiers are occupying in the National, there is the chance of a life-time for Pat Donovan's lads.

Their standing will be improved wonderfully and their prospects brightened a lot if they can give these Browns a good licking, while the Tigers and Athletics are at each others' throats in Philadelphia and the White Sox are fighting the Yanks at New York.

But the Speed Boys will have to play good baseball to win. While the Browns didn't help themselves in their New York series, they gave Chase's men a mean lacing and they intend to make things warm for the Sox. The Browns have strength, more strength than one would give them credit for if judged them only by their victory-less efforts.

They have three pitchers or Wallace's staff who are likely to fatly out any one man's ball club. Barney Petty is a shoot-in class and Jack Powell over in Lake are pushing him for honors. Barney is a right smart hurler besides being possessed of some deceiving stuff. Powell's habit is to pitch them where you don't want them and he seldom proves easy picking when his control is working. Lake is good enough for any pitching staff in the large leagues.

The Brown's Infield.

The Scottish chief is playing shortstop most of the time and doing it nicely. Once in awhile he lays off and gives his understudy, Hoffman, a chance. According to the athletes who have seen this party work, he is going to be a swell performer before his big league career has gone much farther. The left side of the infield looks good with these two shortstoppers switching off and the peppery Jimmy Austin at third.

Manager Wallace isn't having much luck with first baseman and would be inkled to death if he could uncover some one as capable of filling in at that corner as Mike Williams has proven here in Boston.

One discoverer credited is Molly Meloan, the high-priced athlete whom the Chicago Sox landed from Springfield, Ill., last season. Molly burned up the league with his hitting while in the game, but he was hit on the head by a pitched ball and slumped thereafter. The Chicago Sox had decided to ship him back to the minors when Mr. Hedges stepped in and claimed him. Molly, whose other name is Paul, has been banging them out nicely for the Browns and has a place all bound in the batting order.

The more games the Sox win from St. Louis the better they will be fixed for the series with the tough Tigers who come here on Saturday. The Eastern clubs are determined to humble these Detroiters. Washington hasn't helped the cause much, but the Athletics, Sox and Yanks are counted on to cut down the formidable lead of the Michiganders.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

Jack Collins hurt his finger in practice and was out of the game. Tannehill played first for Chicago and Rollie Zeider went in at second.

When Wood's smoke was added to that which hung over the field, it was time for the White Sox to quit. They were lucky that he had good control and didn't lean any of them.

Pat Dougherty batted for Corhan in the ninth and Silk O'Loughlin called a strike on him that looked high to Duffy and Pat. They yelled and Manager Hughey was put off the coaching line.

The pastime was halted for a few moments during the Chicago rally in the sixth while a small black dog chased the outfield.

If Billy Sullivan had bagged Yerkes' easy foul in the first, the story might have had a different plot and a different ending. So let us be thankful to B. Sullivan.

Lord came up with two out and one on in the seventh and hit a foul which either Carrigan or Engle could have grabbed, but they had a collision and the ball struck bottom. Lord then beat out a hit to Wagner, but Wood came forward and checked the rally.

With two strikes on Corhan and two out in the sixth, Ping Bodie tried to steal home. Umpire O'Loughlin called him out at the plate and Ping talked Italian very rapidly for a minute, but Silk didn't know what he was saying, so he couldn't bench him.

Larry Gardner sat on the bench once more and watched Yerkes perform at second. Larry's lower limbs are not so strong at present that he can afford to take chances with them.

SENTENCED TO DIE; UMPIRES BALL GAME

CARSON CITY, Nev., June 6.—Patrick Casey, an old-time ball player who is under sentence of death for murder committed in Goldfield, acted as umpire in what will probably be his last game of the State Penitentiary. For some time two convict ball teams have been practicing for a meeting of Casey's kind. After following the progress of the games by the crack of the bat and the thud of the ball in the prison glove, Casey appealed to the warden for the privilege of seeing and umpiring one more game. He was allowed to do so. No kicks were registered against his decisions.

NORFOLK TO MEET ROSEMONT RIVALS

The Norfolk A. A., a fast amateur team of Dorchester, has arranged a game for Saturday at Ashmont Playgrounds with the fast Rosemont team. The rivalry between these two teams will result with a keen struggle for championship honors. The lineup for the Norfolks is as follows: Heerpin, first; Milner, catcher; Hurley, third; Hawkins, short stop; Tagerman, second; McVeigh, right field; Fuller, centre and Hurford left field, while Goodale and Coughlin will do the twirling.

BALTIMORE OPENS HARNESS RACING

BALTIMORE, June 6.—The season of light harness racing in the East opened this afternoon at the Prospect Park track in this city with three days of racing and two classes announced for each day. Frank B. Walker, the grand circuit starter, will send the horses away, and M. F. Sergeant of Rochester, N. Y., will be the presiding judge. Many of the horses entered for this week's meeting will shortly go into the grand circuit or be shipped to New England for the earling over the mile tracks there.

RAIN MAY END POLO CONTEST

WESTBURY, L. I., June 6.—The weather hoodoo was still working to-day. And November sales, cold winds and a driving rain made up the atmospheric combination which eliminated any possibility of a second game in the international polo tournament being played to-day. The game set for to-day had been postponed from yesterday because of bad weather conditions. There is little relief in the present weather conditions before Friday it is possible that the series between England and America for the international cup will not be completed this year.

The British team, which is made up of army officers, must hurry home, as their furloughs will soon expire. They are booked to sail for Europe on Saturday, for they must report for duty in Aldershot on June 17 to serve during the coronation festivities.

The bond of $150,000 given by the American Express Company when the English polo ponies landed in this country expires on June 10, and the bond must be forfeited or the duty paid unless the ponies are shipped on Friday.

BASEBALL CHATTER

This race in the National League is a hummer. Four clubs—Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburg—are going at a rapid pace. Ownership of first place changes every other day, and it looks as if the fight would be just about as hard all season. New York's Giants are forcing folks to respect them and giving evidence that they are ready to be considered as contenders despite the unkind remarks frequently made about them.

* * *

The debut of Cecil Ferguson can scarcely be called auspicious. However, it is not strange that Fergy should be so wild and ineffective his first time out. He has hardly had a fair chance to get in shape. The fact that he can start is encouraging, for he has class enough to be a standby on the Rustlers when he does recover his aim.

* * *

One Boston "bug," at least, knows that Harry Lord has been visiting us. After one of the Chicago games, as Lord was walking to the carriage that was waiting to convey him to the hotel, this fan informed Harry that he was playing on a team and that he was no good. Harry merely said, "Is that so?" and landed a punch on the critic's jaw that knocked him out cold. Harry carried a damaged hand to show for his trouble and the "bug" took home a badly swollen chin. Mr. Lord, Sr., was a witness of the brief encounter.

* * *

Rollie Zeider of the White Sox wants to try an experiment. He is anxious to know what an umpire would do if a batsman lying over the fence and three yards to the rear should bat a ball which Rollie elouts one out of the park in a few days. He is going to walk straight to the bench and wait for developments. That is his intention now, but, as I say, Rollie may change his mind before he gets a chance to try it.

* * *

Some American Leaguers are willing to bet that Ping Bodie will not be hitting .225 when the final day of August arrives, according to them. Ping has weaknesses and the pitchers are bound to discover it pretty soon. It is presumed to be curve. Only time and the pitchers will tell if Ping may fool them, but even some of his teammates think he will fall down on the job sooner or later.

* * *

Owen Bush, Detroit's fast shortstop, was the bane of contention last year. Ty Cobb and Sam Crawford in their recent quarrel about ballplayers have one bit and run also for the man preceding them in the batting order. Cobb has four or five hits pinned on them two or three times, at least Cobb said he did, and Crawford took the shortstop's part, telling Ty that his vision was too complicated. The hard feeling that existed between the two star outfielders doesn't appear to have hurt the Tigers a bit. Cobb is the same old Georgia peach and Crawford is showing more speed than at any time in recent years.

* * *

George Mullin, the Detroit pitcher, thought he had discovered a way to fool Joe Jackson, the Sox slugger. Mullin decided that Jackson couldn't do much with balls pitched right over the heart of the plate. He tried his scheme on Joe frequently in the Southern League and wonder grabbed off a couple of triples. Mullin now says that Joe has no weakness.

LAWRENCE BOY EXETER CAPTAIN

EXETER, N. H., June 6.—William J. Bingham, '12, of Lawrence, Mass., was unanimously elected captain of the Phillips Exeter track team for next year. Bingham is probably the most popular boy in school, being last year's president of the Christian Association and this year's manager of the football eleven. Before entering Exeter he attended the evening school at Lawrence, and will wear the Blue of Yale after his exeter days.

GALWAY OUT OF BOWLING MATCH

There will be no championship bowling match at Lowell this month between Poole or Martel and Christopher-Galway, according to the statement made exclusively to the AMERICAN by one close to Bill Galway at Galway's home out of training and will not consider any match before another season.

It appears that Galway had the idea that his recent almost of John's comforters had departed for good and agreed to enter in the Lowell match for the cueliopin championship of America. With this view in mind he began work on the alleys, but after a few nights' bowling practice the rocky boils again came to the front.

It was then that Galway determined to throw up trying to get into shape, telling a few of his best friends the match was off, and he will so declare at the meeting of the principals scheduled for this week, the meeting in which was intended the remainder of the stake money was to have been posted.

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—The Rustlers arrived in town to-day for a series with the National league team. They come with but little courage owing to the drubbing they received in Cincinnati.

No manager had ever reached here other than he started the wires going in every direction. He wants ballplayers and wants them bad. But somehow or other he finds them hard to get. Either there are none or Fred hasn't the price to produce them.

At Mattern will pitch for Boston to-day if the game is played. The storm has not entirely abated and there is a possibility of no game.

The last time the two teams played they fought to keep out of last place. Since then the Rustlers have been checking that position, while the fast St. Louis team has been slowly and with difficulty climbing up until now they are the leaders in the second division.

NEW "WHITE HOPE" IS FOUND ON THE COAST

Uncle Tom McCarey, the father of the boxing game in the lower end of California, thinks that he has discovered a "hope" that will some day wrest the title from present champion McCarey's new find is Joe Davies, and he is said to be the son of old Jack Davies, who whipped Jack Cleveland. McCarey has arranged for a try-out, and has matched Joe with one of the trial horse heavyweights of Los Angeles. Davies appears to have the physical qualities, with his 206 pounds weight and his 6 feet four inches height. All there remains to be found out is whether he has the heart and the willingness, two of a few of the most essential parts of a champion's make-up.

MELROSE HIGH BOY FOR MAJOR LEAGUE

Both the Philadelphia Athletics and New York Highlanders have taken notice of the work of Hahn Ryan, the star schoolboy pitcher of the Melrose High team, whose showing in the Suburban League this season has been of an exceptional order. Both clubs of the Highlanders had an opportunity to see the boy at his best last Saturday and while non-committal as to the intentions of the New York team was much in evidence. It is very doubtful if he could be induced to entertain any offer of a professional nature, as he intends to enter Brown in the Fall and should prove to be a big asset for the Providence college in the box during his college career.

COSTER WILL FIGHT DIXON-RIVERS WINNER

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—The July card of the Pacific Athletic Club will probably have for its feature event a 20-rounder between the winner of the Dixon-Rivers match, which is scheduled for June 10, and Joe Coster. The victor is the lanky who showed the earmarks of a comer by trouncing Frankie Conley a week ago yesterday. Rivers has agreed to the proposition that Joe Coster step in the ring before the local club, and it is probable that Dixon will fall into line.

20 MUNICIPAL LEAGUE DATES

At a meeting of the managers of the Municipal Baseball League, in the News Club, the schedule for the opening games, to be played next Saturday, was decided upon. There are forty teams in the league, the players averaging eighteen years of age. The teams are divided into four divisions according to their relative strength.

DORCHESTER DAY GAME

The Warren A. A. of Dorchester would like to arrange a game with some old timers of 18-19 year-old team for the Dorchester Day celebration. James Curran, No. 19 Edson street, Dorchester.

"CY" YOUNG TO QUIT DIAMOND

"Cy" Young, whose running as a pitcher went more than one hundred league games, is about to retire. The management of the Cleveland Baseball Club of the American League says he misses on Denton T. ("Cy") Young, and this name is believed to be but preliminary to handing him his unconditional release.

Baseball will lose one of its most successful and picturesque heroes when "Cy" pitches his last game and quits the diamond for good. Young announced at the beginning of the season that if he found he could not get into shape in the pitch winning ball he would retire from the game. So far this season he has been unable to take his regular turn in the box. The stunning of his wonderful right arm, which has won so many magnificent baseball victories, is gone. "Cy" is said to realize his role more than anyone else and he is satisfied to give up his place in the pitching box to some younger aspirant.

Young reached his major league majority this season by having been in the fray of game in Cleveland in 1890. When he left Boston in 1901 to return to Cleveland he began to fall off in his work.

No man on the diamond had more Boston admirers than "Cy" Young. He endeared himself to the local fans by his magnificent work while with the Boston American League team and that affection has always been retained. Young will return never forget his Boston friends.

The veteran is very ambitious to pitch for any minor league organization and if he will leave Cleveland he will realize his ambitions. Young is well-to-do for he has earned big salaries during his twenty-one years in the box and he has a large and productive farm in Duff, Ohio, on which he has always said he would retire when his major league days were done.

What a Lot of Fun a Fellow Misses When He Decides to Be Good

We took a cruise around the neighborhood in cans and broken bottles, which some hood yesterday afternoon but were unable to gather anything in the way of first class up-to-the-minute baseball dope. There was no game yesterday and the league grounds were deserted, except for "Slinky" McSmith, the ground keeper, who was wandering around picking up a few fly balls.

After wasting about a half hour, as would have it, we spied "Skinny" Shaner, "Blinky" we left the grounds and started for home feeling pretty good, as our fertile brain had worked up a good excuse for a day off. We were going down to the office to tell the editor that the league was locked up for the day and ask him for a chance to go fishing, but as luck up we guessed that the somebody was Emily Morton. Sure enough, we were right, for a minute after we spotted him she appeared and they went arm in arm down the street. We immediately sent one of our best reporters to follow them and he told us that they entered the Moving Picture Palace.

Our reporter said he was ashamed to step "Skinny" while he was with a lady and ask him where he got the ten cents to squander, so we will not know until we see him alone.

A simple little thing like "Skinny" appearing in a straw hat and taking Emily Morton to a moving picture show was sufficient to arouse the jealousy of the entire neighborhood. When we left for home there was a mob of less than a million kids clustered around the entrance to the theatre waiting for him. We hope that he got home safely.

A Sure Way to Kill Love

The Woman Who Is Miserable Because Her Husband Is Kind to Other Women

By DOROTHY DIX.

A WOMAN complains to me that she is very miserable because the man with whom she is in love sometimes with every woman that he sees who is in distress, and tries to help her. My correspondent considers this a grievous fault in the man, and asks if I can tell her how she can cure him of it.

A fault for a man to be sorry for a woman in trouble? Want to break him of it? Want to change him?

Why, woman alive, pluck the mote out of your own eyes, so that you can see that you have got a gentle, chivalrous knight for a lover, and go down on your knees and thank God for your luck.

A man who sympathizes with every woman he sees in trouble, whose heart melts in him at the sight of every gray-headed old woman he sees staggering along the street under her heavy burden of years and work; whose hand gets out instinctively to lift the burden of every tired woman he meets; who pities the frail, little, white-faced girl who works next to him and helps her with her tasks—that man is one of nature's noblemen, and happy and fortunate is the woman who gets him for a husband.

For pity's sake, for your own sake, don't try to break him of the habit of sympathizing with women; for the time will come, sister, when you will need, if you marry, to call upon all the tenderness and sympathy that any man can possibly supply.

As He Treats Others He Treats Her

Of course, you think that no matter how callous and hard your husband is to other women, that he will overflow towards you with pity and comprehension; but this is not true. Unless a man is filled with the divine pity and understanding of all that women must suffer and endure he turns towards his wife the same stony attitude that he does toward the balance of her sex.

Every woman in the world believes that she will be vouchsafed the miracle of getting a man who is ice to all other women and fire to her; who is iron to the world, but clay in her hands; but no woman has ever yet inveigled this phenomenon of nature as far as the altar.

As a man in his treatment of other women, so is his treatment of his wife. Only a little more so. The man who is harsh and scolding to his female employees is found to be so to his wife.

The man who is kind and considerate to his girl clerks and stenographers surrounds his wife with every loving care and protection.

The man who tramples roughshod over women to grab the last seat in the street car is the sort of man who gobbles the best on the table and rides in taxicabs while his wife walks to save street car fare.

The man who sympathizes with every woman in trouble has for his wife a tenderness that is in all enveloping as the tenderness of God.

Don't try to change a man who is sorry for women, sister. There are too few of them in these days of lack of chivalry. If you admire the street car hog type of man, hearty and hog, but don't try to change a gentleman into it. It's sacrilege.

Evidently She Is Jealous

Evidently, the trouble with my correspondent is that she is jealous. She doesn't object to the sympathy of the man when it is showered on her, but she doesn't want any other woman to have any share in it. She is a foolish, feminine monopolist, who believes she can establish such a copper riveted trust on a man's heart that he will be oblivious to the fact that there's another petticoat on earth.

There are plenty of women like that. They demand to be all in all to a man. They are not satisfied with being his best beloved, the one he has chosen from out of all the world for his wife. They are miserable if he even notices another woman, if he is sorry for a woman who weeps, or glad with one who rejoices.

Before they are married, they go into hysterics if the man is civil to any woman whom he happens to meet. After they are married, they treat their husband to certain lectures if the poor man so much as pays another woman a compliment.

And inasmuch as in the ordinary course of life and business men and women are thrown constantly together they unconsciously force their husbands to become Mars and deceivers; for no man is going to tell the truth about the women he sees if he knows it is going to precipitate a domestic storm.

As a plain, working proposition, any woman may write it down in her little book that no one woman can possibly be everything to a man, even to her own husband. She can't take him off to a desert isle, where she would be the only woman. He would get so tired of her he would drawn himself to get rid of her if she did so sequester him.

Therefore, it is up to every sweetheart and every wife to meet the "other women" proposition with a little common sense if she wants to keep the man from regarding her as a tyrant whom he is sure to learn to hate.

A Sure Way to Kill Love

Certainly, no woman can choose a surer or more expeditious way of killing love than by always nagging a man about other women, or by showing herself so small of soul and so little worthy of a generous heart as to begrudge even the sympathy that a chivalrous man shows to the weak and helpless of her own sex.

For my part, I think the most beautiful sight I ever witnessed was when I once saw a young man pick up a drunken woman from a restaurant floor. He spoke to her as gently as a mother might to a little child, and in his face was a compassion that glorified it. I know that man makes a good husband, because he is pitiful to all women, even to the erring.

Two of a Kind

RIPLEY HITCHCOCK, the critic, was talking at the Authors' Club about a well known publisher.

"He took up with a young writer last year," said Mr. Hitchcock, "who, as it turned out, missed fire. But he expected great things of the young man, and, while his first book was in press, he made him a present of a cheap motor-car.

"Some months later the two met. They shook hands cordially. Then the author said:

"'Look here, you know that car you gave me? Well, it won't go.'

"'Neither will your book,' hissed the publisher, as he hurried on."

A SHARP THRUST

This is a quotation from a Connecticut woman's diary, dated 1790; "We had roast pork for dinner; and Dr. S., who carved, held up a rib on his fork and said: 'Here, ladies, is what Mother Eve was made of.' Yes,' said Sister Patty, 'and it's from very much the same kind of critter.'"

The Cocksure Man

By KENNETT HARRIS

I DON'T care a cent for an argyment,
Whatever the same may be,
On the tariff laws, or on women's cause,
Or the hen and the egg you may work your jaws;
But you can't get a fuss with me.
For I don't enthuse on my pers'nal views
But I hold to my own idee.

With a well-hung tongue and a leather lung
You can talk folks off to sleep;
You can yawp all day in the slickest way
But you bet your stockin's it will never pay;
You will find that this talk is cheap.
You can yell your proof till you raise the roof,
But the notion I've got I'll keep.

I could answer back all your guff and slack,
I could spout in the way you blow,
I could bluff and lie; if I'd arguffy,
I could make you swaller, if I'd time to try,
All them things that you say ain't so.
But I ain't no school for a big born fool
And the things what I know I know.

If a thing ain't so, I can let it go—
I've no call for to contradick.
I can curl my nose in a way that shows
That I'm right cock-sure where you only s'pose.
It's a safe and an easy trick.
For I'm not all-bent on an argyment—
I make up my mind and stick.

A Successful Wife

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT
By G. DORSET

Copyright, 1910, by Harper & Brothers.

PART ONE—(Continued)

AND this gave me a sharp pain. Mr. Holmes blinked at me through his double glasses. I knew as well as he did that my husband was a born author and a born poet, but they are as unlucky—nearly always.

Mr. Collins exclaimed: "You are perfectly right, Mrs. Kirkland! Kirk has found his cut, and I hope he'll stick there."

Those were just the words I had used in my own mind.

My husband had glanced from face to face, like a boy at his examination, to see what each gentleman thought, and he appeared relieved. One of the others, who was a lawyer in a successful firm, asked my husband directly:

"How do you feel about it, Kirk?"

And he answered: "Gentlemen, whatever my wife says goes. She is the wisest little woman in the world!"

And I was very much embarrassed and a little ashamed, for I knew it hadn't been wisdom, but plain common sense.

A Face at the Theatre

One evening when my husband had failed to come home to dinner as I sat upstairs in my slippers before the register, he stamped in at seven-thirty, his hat and overcoat still on, his face dark and heavy—the old trouble lying there.

"Esther," he asked, shortly, "how long will it take you to get ready to go to the theatre?"

Another time I would have been perfectly delighted; since our marriage he hadn't asked me to go to a show on any place of amusement—indeed, he had seemed so much all his life he didn't care any more for amusements; but his face that night didn't suggest a pleasure spree. I hesitated.

"I will be ready."

People usually like to put on nice things for the theatre, but I grabbed a jacket and a hat and a tippet, while he stood there in the doorway, staring straight before him. I dragged out some gloves, and when I went to put them on on the cars found they were both for one hand. As I was, so we went, and so fast I could hardly keep up with Mr. Kirkland; but not until we got over to the cars did I realize that I had on my bedroom slippers and that it was January and freezing. Why I didn't take cold right there and have pneumonia I don't know, but I didn't. My husband never spoke to me until we got into the Academy of Music and were in our places. They were in the front row. The performance was "Erminie," and my husband was awfully taken with the operetta. He enjoyed it as a boy might have done, and smiled and laughed and applauded until we were conspicuous. I thought it was a bright, pretty piece and that the chorus girls were lovely and awfully immodest. At the end of the first act my husband said:

"Esther, notice the girl on the end, that ideal creature with the rosebud mouth and the divine figure."

She was pretty as a picture, and at Mr. Kirkland's attention she smiled. He never took his eyes off her, and talked about her all through the play and called her "Hebe," and said, "A man could feat to heaven on that girl's grace."

I didn't want to be mean, but, I didn't think any man would float in that direction with an Erminie chorus-girl.

The Theatre Again

The next night we went to see "Erminie" again. Stephen telephoned me to meet him at the theatre, and we had the same seats. It was pretty enough to see twice, but after we had seen it four times I began to get sick of "Erminie." However, it still amused my husband, and after a time he paid no attention to the show, and only stared and stared at that one pretty girl. He called her Helen when he spoke of her—her name was Pearley Drew on the bill—and once he said to me between the acts:

"Is that the face that launched a thousand ships?"

And I answered that I guessed so. Pearley Drew was pretty enough to set a good many things afloat.

We saw "Erminie" every night for six weeks!

We had the same places always, and everybody grew to know us at the theatre. The ushers called my husband Mr. Kirkland; he tipped everybody, and, of course, Pearley Drew knew us intimately. But I am sure she thought my husband a lunatic and me his nurse.

He never saw her once off the stage. That was the curious part of it.

Of course, as I sat there, I got to thinking about other things, and did up accounts, and lots of times I dozed off to sleep.

Six weeks!

Don't talk to me about the theatre! I knew every line of that piece by heart; and most of the time my husband never thought of the show or anything.

One night he said: "Helen is getting thin; her cheeks have lost that divine curve. Esther, don't you think her beauty has worn off?"

And I answered that I didn't wonder it had worn off after "launching a thousand ships," and laughed heartily.

"You remember that! The quotation is from Marlowe's "Faustus"—a great work of art, by-the-way." He got up out of his seat—this was between acts. "Come, Esther, come," he said, and walked out of the theatre as fast as possible. I can't say that I was sorry to leave "Erminie," but I was troubled about him—the spell was broken.

Fighting All Alone

After this he grew terribly melancholy, and it was fearful to watch him fighting all alone, in silence and in the dark, yet I never spoke to him about his battle.

One morning after breakfast he said:

"It is astonishing how cruel a good woman can be. Isn't it?"

I supposed he meant me, and answered that I didn't know I was either the one or the other.

He was tying on a new cravat, blue, with a little white dot in it. It was Sunday morning, and the morning papers were all scattered around the room.

"Have you cried to me, my dear girl. But I think that, as far as the rest of the world goes, you don't care a hang what happens to do you?"

"What do you want me to do for somebody?" I asked him, and he turned around quickly.

"What do I want? There it is! Why, my dear girl, you will make me a colossal egotist yet!"

Then he told me Mr. Sinclair was ill—had been perfectly miserable for a long time, disheartened and dispirited—and that he had come into Mr. Kirkland's office once or twice, and my husband was worried about him.

"He is hard up and broken up, Esther—for your sake I have been a fiend to poor old Sin.'

Coming as sois did on the back of my husband's melancholy, it troubled me and I asked him again what he wanted me to do, and he replied, severely:

"I want you to do as your heart dictates."

And I thought for a little while, and then replied:

"I have done that already."

He was angry, and went on to say that women were cruel and full of prejudices, and that he prayed to be delivered from a woman's judgment, and that as far as he was concerned he was going over to Brooklyn to see Mr. Sinclair.

I took my hat and coat and told him I was going, too. It was a bitter March day, windy and dull, and the trip long and cold. My husband, however, took it as an excursion, and was gay and cheerful.

"Poor old Sin! He will be wild with pleasure to receive this embassy of peace. He has been eating his heart out over his disapproval and over his own hard luck."

Then once more he said as we went along: "I'm afraid Sin is very hard up these days. I have an idea that he is quite poor."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

The Harem Skirt

MRS. FRENCH VANDERBILT was the admiration of Palm Beach in the early Spring, and among her intimates her wit caused almost envy as admiration.

The harem skirt was being discussed one morning by a white-clad party that gayly followed the Jungle Trail in those wheel chairs called afromobiles.

Mrs. French Vanderbilt, reclining in her wheel chair, said with a smile:

"I saw a good many harem skirts on manequins in Paris. I don't like them. To wear them is to my mind"——

She smiled faintly

"——To wear them is one of the breaches of etiquette."

At Mrs. Dolan's Boarding House

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

In Which Ruth Comes From Work With Renewed Courage and Energy

WHEN Ruth received her pay envelope that rainy Friday afternoon it contained only eight dollars—a five dollar bill and three ones. There was with it no note of dismissal, nor had she been given notice during the day.

This meant at least another week at the Greenberg Company. But she felt it would not be much longer, for several girls had been laid off that day. It merely chanced that she was not among them. So she resolved that during this coming week she would spend all her spare time in seeking another position.

The Empire Employment Agency had sent her to this one, but it was in no way a desirable place. She had taken it only because it was her first position and because she needed it desperately. But now she felt there might be better ways to secure work than through the Empire Employment Agency.

The very fact that she had another week's leeway gave her courage. And though, when she left the office, it was still raining—the same dull, persistent rain in which she had started out that morning—it did not now depress her.

Ruth's Mind Fills With Plans

Her mind was filled with plans—with vague, unformed hopes. What might not she accomplish before another week? She was more familiar with the city now. The events and noise did not bewilder her as they had at first. And she was much more familiar with the streets, particularly in the business district.

One of her first purchases had been a twenty-five-cent guide to Boston, with a map of the city. She had tried to fix the main thoroughfares in her mind, and by them gradually to locate the other streets. The squares confused her, but on the whole she had now a fair knowledge of the city.

Also she had traced the route of the subway and the elevated roads, and knew just what car to take to the principal stations. In this, too, her guide book had been of great help.

Ruth was a very ambitious and determined young woman, and she had come to Boston to succeed. And now, as she left the car at the corner and hurried through the rain to her little room in Mrs. Dolan's boarding house, she was filled with renewed courage and confidence.

One how small a thing one's mood and happiness sometimes depends! That morning Ruth had left the boarding-house with a very heavy heart. The world had seemed full of gloom and misery.

And now, while nothing had changed—it was still raining, the sky was still dull—yet with the light heart Ruth ran up the steps, lowered her dripping umbrella and fitted her latch key in the shabby front door.

What Made the Change?

Inside, the hall was just as dark and damp, and the odors just as musty as they had been this morning. But, somehow, now, she did not notice them.

The front door open long enough to look over the few letters and post cards on the hat rack, but there was nothing for her. On the stairs she stumbled over a dust pan and broom, left there by the maid, but she only laughed and hurried on.

Her own room was just as crowded and disordered as when she had left it this morning—the maid had only smoothed up the bed, with no attempt at dusting or straightening. And now Ruth took off her things, slipped on an old wrapper and started energetically to "clean up." She went down and brought up the dust pan and broom she had stumbled over on the stairs.

The room had not been swept since she had been there and, with a towel pinned over her hair, she swept and dusted it thoroughly, humming a song as she worked.

When she was all through she bathed and put on her one white dress for dinner.

She wondered why she had been so wretched that morning. Why had she been so depressed and discouraged? She received not to let herself give way to "the blues" again. Why should she? With youth and health and courage, and with all the possibilities that Boston had to offer—why should she not succeed?

Desperate Desmond

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

Desmond has found out a very neat little stunt for putting the kibosh on Claude Eclaire and his cowboy and Indian friends. He has bound them hand and foot and laid them out in a row and is preparing to drive a big circus wagon over them. To give the wagon extra weight he has put the biggest elephant he can find into it.

And poor, dear Rosamond has to sit by the villain's side and watch the cruel wheels crush the life out of her brave young hero. If Desperate Desmond thinks he can win her love by such methods as that, he has another guess. Some girls might admire a man who did that sort of thing, but not sweet Rosamond.

As the wagon rolls along the elephant sees a chunk of mayhem mumbling on the green. Yes, dear reader, we know that florence is not the gopher's regular habitat, but the elephant doesn't know. Anyway, the elephant wants to get at the little rodents, but the wagon is slowly carrying him out of reach.

Any other animal would have been stumped, but the elephant is right there with the brain work. Thrusting his left hind foot through the bars of the cage, he uses it as a broke to stop the wheel. But Desmond does not want to stop the procession at this point, so he gets after the elephant with a sharp iron hook.

The elephant doesn't like that hook business a little bit, so he reaches up and grabs Desmond around the neck with his trunk and pulls the villain off his perch. This gives Rosamond an opportunity to escape, which she advances lynching. Either would be good, but both would be still better. However, to-morrow's pictures will show what they decide to do.

Desperate Desmond is in the hands of his enemies once more. Now the question is what to do with him. Some are in favor of applying a coat of tar and feathers, which seems advocate lynching. Either would be good, but both would be still better. However, to-morrow's pictures will show what they decide to do.

Their Pleasant Summer

Why She and Tom Were a Bit Sensitive on the Question of Vacation

"WHERE," asked the caller, in conventionally polite tones and with lukewarm interest, "are you going for the Summer?"

The effect on her hostess was electrical. She sat bolt upright, dropped the teapot with a bang and exclaimed, "Going! We're not going—we're staying!"

"My goodness!" gasped the caller. "Excuse me for mentioning it if it's a tender subject."

"It's not tender," said her hostess energetically. "It's worse—it's an impossible subject! We went away last Summer and that's the reason.

"The Tunills announced that they were going to Europe and said that we'd occupy the big place across the lake for the season and see that the servants didn't fight and that the cows didn't eat up the garden we'd make them our debtors for life. They finally let us pay them a ridiculously small rental, and then we abandoned ourselves to dreams of one perfect Summer.

"We stored our furniture when the lease expired in May and rushed headlong to our doom. We thought it was a paradise on earth toward which we were flying, and maybe it would have been if the cook and the maid and the man of all work at the place hadn't decided that since their rest family was gone this would be a nice time to run home to the old country for a visit. And they went, two days after we came. They hooked us over in a cold and critical way and disappeared in a huff and departed.

Got Lots of Exercise

"We got lots of exercise before we found help. Tom used to arise at 4 to weed the garden and I got up at the same time to feed the chickens, turn on the automatic pump, get breakfast and superintend Tom's milking.

"He was kicked through the barn door only twice and we considered that the record was pretty good for a greenhorn. He had some minor mishaps, like pulling back all the beans when they came up and pushing the seed ahead of them and training the potato vines up on strings instead of the peas, but troubles didn't really start till later.

"One day we were sitting in the flower garden having lunch and I told Dotty, aged four, to go indoors for something. We watched her disappear into the house, and then Tom said: 'Could anything be more peaceful or inspiring than this perfect day?' And I responded in similar bimsy verse:

"Just then the neighbor whose cottage was on the lake shore came tearing around the corner of our house.

"She stared at us as though we annoyed her. 'Aren't you folks in bathing?' she inquired. 'Well, somebody is out in front and I thought——'

When Troubles Began

"Tom and I did a foot race to the lake and he fished Dotty out of the water unconscious and black in the face. That child had marched in at the back door of the house and as promptly marched out through the front door and proceeded to take a paddle by herself in the lake, inspired by some unaccountable juvenile longing.

"Dotty came out of her trance in two hours, but during that time I got ten gray hairs, and Tom's nervous system was permanently shattered.

"It was a couple of weeks later that Dotty and Tom, Jr., were taken seriously ill. The doctor murmured something about defective drains. There was a blur of trained nurses and horrors for a time, and then the smoke of battle cleared away.

"Meanwhile the cows had eaten that part of the garden that had not dried up for lack of attention, and the chickens were laying eggs all over the country. The Tunills never did get them back.

"They'd send us postcards from Europe saying, 'We saw this to-day. Hope you are enjoying life at the dear old home.' This while I was burning fumigating candles. Or, 'We came down this river to-day. How you must be enjoying the garden green things.' That came the day the cows ate the last of the green corn we had expected to use ourselves.

"A little while later Tom dropped a flatiron on his foot, and blood poisoning set in. Then the Tunills sent a postcard saying, 'We can just imagine you doing the five-mile walk through Elm lane and the woods. We envy you.'

"The worst of all was that the family sent Tom's pretty and harum-scarum sister Nell to us so that she'd forget the ineligible man she was trying to get engaged to. I produced all the young men at the hotel and several village lights to distract her, and so perfectly did I succeed that she eloped with a college boy who was running a launch to pay his Summer expenses. As the family was saving up a millionaire for Nell when she should have come to her senses they still feel hard toward me, and say I should have had more sense.

"When we came back to town in the Fall all the good data were taken and the moths had got into our rugs, and I had lost fifteen pounds and all my color, and Tom was a dyspeptic old grouch. It's taken all Winter to get Dotty and Tom, Jr., civilized again and on the whole we've concluded that the family will be better off if it dashes itself the strain of a Summer vacation. We're going to stick right here!"

"It does sound safer," admitted the caller.

COURTING CALAMITIES

"Here's a fellow hugged a girl so tightly that the buttons fell off her ribs."

"I've often broken a lot of expensive cigars."

He Could Have

HE never framed a tariff bill according to the people's will,
That most such just requirement;
still, he could have.
If he had been to Congress sent and studied things to some extent,
And knew what ad valorem meant, he would have.
He never home and friends forsook to find the Pole like Doctor Cook;
He didn't even start to look. He could have.
If he had had a friend with dough to stake him to some Eskimo,
And dogs to haul him through the snow, he would have.
He never cracked the Johnson nut with one tremendous uppercut
Or soaked his solar plexus, but he could have.
If he had taken time to train, with muscle equal to his brain,
And wasn't soualtive to pain, he would have.
He never cornered kerosene like Rockefeller, Jay and Jean,
Or real estate like Hetty Green. He could have.
If he had been well satisfied to skin a flea and tan its hide,
And fry the tallow out beside, he would have.
He never played the violin or preached against prevailing sin.
He always hated to begin. He could have,
But what is his faith was quite sublime that he to any height could climb.
He thought about the rough old times he would have.
You see he'd always want to chuck the game when he'd a line to buck.
And you can't think what wretched luck he could have.
His backbone wasn't very stiff. He couldn't stand a little biff,
But if it hadn't been for "if" he would have.

The De Bercy Affair

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT
By GORDON HOLMES
Copyright, 1910, by Edward J. Clode

YET I have had curious tokens, hints, fancies, of late. Four nights ago, as I was driving down Pall Mall from Lady Sinclair's dinner dansant. It was about 11:30—I saw a man in the shadow at a corner who I could have sworn for a moment was F. I didn't see his face, for as the carriage approached him he turned his back, and it was that turning of the back. I think, that made me observe him. Suppose all the time F. knows of me! —knows who Rose de Bercy is! I never wanted to have that Academy portrait painted, and I must have been mad to consent in the end. If F. says it? If he knows? What would he do? His nature is capable of ravaging flames of passion! Suppose he killed me? But could a poor woman be so unlucky? No, he doesn't know, he can't; fate is not so hard. Then there is that wretched Pauline—she shan't be in this house another week. My quarrel with her this morning was the third, and the most bitter of all. Really, the girl knows too much for me to permit of our living any longer under one roof; and, what is more, she has twice dropped hints lately which certainly seem to bear of no interpretation that she knows of my work in Berlin for the Russian government. Oh, but that must only be the madness of my fancy! Two persons, and two only, in the whole world know of it—how could she, possibly? Yet she said in her Friday passion: "You will not be a long liver, Madame, you have been too untrue to your dupes." Untrue to my dupes! Which dupes? My God, if she meant the Anarchists!

Clarke's face was a study when he came to that word. It wore the beatific expression of the man who is justified in his own judgment.

Aunt suppose that she knows! For that she is mixed up with some of them to some uncertain extent I have guessed for two years. And if they know that I have actually been a Government agent; they would do for me, ok, they would, I know. It would be all up with me. Those Anarchists a few months ago in the promenoire at Covent Garden, said to me: "By the way, do you know that you have been condemned to death?" I forget a propos of what he said it, and have never given it a thought from that day. He was bantering me, laughing in the lightest vein, but—God! it never struck me like this before!—Suppose there was earnest under the jest, deep-hidden under? He is a deep, deep, evil beast, that man. Those were his words—I remember distinctly. "By the way, do you know that you have been condemned to death?" "By the way," his heavy face shook with chuckling. And it never once till now entered my head!—Oh, but, after all, I must be horribly ill to be having such thoughts this day! The beast, of course, didn't mean anything. Think, of saying, "by the way?"—the terrible, evil beast. Oh, yes, I am ill. I have begun to die. This night, maybe, my soul shall be required of me. I hear Marguerite saying again. "Well, she sought for it," and my father's bitter sobbing. "I wish to Heaven I had died for her!" But, if I am killed this day, it will be by . . . or by C. E. F. . . . .

Scratched Out Blot

That last dash after the "F." was not, Clarke saw, merely a dash, for it was long curved line, as if her elbow had been struck, or she herself violently startled. She had probably intended, this time, to write the name in full, but the interruption stopped her.

At the spot of the first dash lay thick ink marks—really made by Pauline Desnauis—and Clarke, cute enough to see this, now commenced to scratch out the ink blot with a penknife, and after the black dust was scraped away, he used a damp sponge.

It was a delicate, slow operation, his idea being that, since under those layers of ink by a written name, if he removed the layers with dainty care, then he would see the name beneath. And this was no doubt true in theory, but in practice no eye was daring enough to do the trick with much success.

He did, however, manage to see the shape of some letters, and, partly with the aid of his magnifying glass, partly with the aid of his imagination, he seemed to make out the word "Janoc."

The murder, then, was committed either by Janoc, or by C. E. F.—this, as the mantle of the night wore threadbare, and some gray was showing through it in the east, Clarke became certain of.

Who was C. E. F.? There was Furneaux, of course. Those were his initials, and as the name of Furneaux arose in his chair-back, and a long, delicious spasm mind, Clarke's head dropped back over his of laughter shook him.

Now the idea that it might, in very truth, be Furneaux who was meant never for one instant occurred to him. He assumed that it must needs be some French or Russian C. E. F., but the joke of the coincidence of the initials with Furneaux's, who had charge of the case, lute whose hands the case had been given by Winter over his (Clarke's) head, was so rich, that he resolved to show the diary to Winter, and to try and keep from bursting out laughing, while he said:

"Look here, sir—this is your Furneaux!"

Clarke, indeed, had heard at the inquest how Furneaux had been seen on the evening of the murder in Osborne's museum, from which the "coil" and the dagger had vanished.

Hearing this, his mind had instantly remembered the "C. E. F." of the diary, and had been amazed at such a coincidence. But his brain never sprang to grapple with the possibility that Rose de Bercy, might, in truth, be afraid of Furneaux. So, whoever "C. E. F." might be, Clarke had no interest in him, never suspected him; his thoughts had too long been preoccupied with one idea—Janoc. Janoc, Anarchist—to receive any new bent with real perspicacity and interest.

Confirmed in Opinion

And the diary confirmed him in this opinion; for she had actually been condemned to death as an agent of the Russian Government months before. At last he stood up, stretching his arms in weariness and tumbling into bed.

"Well," he said, that I was right!" he said again, and again he laughed.

When he was going out in the morning, he put some more ink-marks over the "Janoc" in the diary—for he did not mean that any other than himself should lay his hand on the murderer of Rose de Bercy—and when he arrived at Scotland Yard, he showed the diary to the Chief Inspector.

Winter laid it on the desk before him, and as he read where Clarke's finger pointed, his face went as colorless as the paper he was looking at.

A laugh broke out behind him.

"Furneaux!"

And Winter, glancing round, saw Clarke's face blurry, she covered Rose in a state of gayety, showing a tooth or two lacking, and browned fangs. For a moment he stared at Clarke, without comprehension, till the absurd truth rushed in upon him that Clarke was really taking it in jest. Then he, too, laughed even more loudly.

"Ha! ha! yes! Furneaux! Fan my bonor, the funniest thing! Furneaux it is for sure!"

"Officer in charge of the case!"

"Ripping! By gad, I shall have to apply for a warrant!"

Feeling the chief in this rare good humor, Clarke thought to obtain a little useful information.

"Do you know any of the Anarchist crowd with those initials, sir?" he asked.

"I think I do; yes, a Frenchman. By the way, sir," stopping, "there is one thing when she means—no telling. But where on earth did you come across this diary?"

"You remember the lady's-maid, Pauline, to-day? She couldn't be found to give evidence at the inquest? I was following the Anarchist Antonio, who seemed to be prowling after some ladies in a cab a day or two ago, and the door that was opened to the ladies when their cab stopped was opened by—Pauline."

Then he told how he had obtained the diary, and volunteered a theory as to the girl's possession of it.

"She must have picked it up in the flat on reading home from the Exhibition on the night of the murder, and kept it."

They discussed the circumstances fully, and Clarke went away, his conscience clear of having kept the matter dark from head quarters, yet confident that he had not put Winter on the track of his own special "find."

And as his footsteps became faint and faded behind the closed door, Winter put his head full low, almost upon the desk, and, in his extremity, laughed, as he were from himself, a long while until subsided, emerging up with a face all fiery, he cried aloud in a rage:

"By the nether nastiness! By the Lord, I'm done with it. From this hour Inspector Furneaux is under the eye of the police!"

The Appletons Entertain Aunt Cordelia During an Auto Ride

WHEN Aunt Cordelia Updike goes on a trip she takes with her a large thirst for knowledge and a note book that is not much smaller.

In this note book she makes memoranda of all she sees and hears that will be interesting to work into a paper to read before her literary society at home, and she arrived at the home of Lysander John Appleton with every pencil sharpened.

"They have an automobile," she had said, when leaving home, "and are equipped to take me around to all the historic spots. I anticipate a great gleaning of knowledge while with them."

And Aunt Cordelia Updike was taken for a ride:

"This spot," said Lysander John, after driving a short way, "is a noted one. It was right here, in the Fall of 1910, that I lost my first tire."

Aunt Cordelia looked bewildered, but tried to appear interested.

Showing the Noted Spots

The automobile began to slow down before an immense building and Aunt Cordelia opened her notebook and moistened her pencil.

"Don't you remember," said Lysander John, turning to his wife, "about this curbing? It was here I ran the machine on the sidewalk."

Aunt Cordelia hastily concealed her notebook and smiled feebly.

"Is that a historic stream?" she asked when they neared a bridge.

Lysander John spelled the name for her, and Aunt Cordelia wrote it heatily in her notebook and pressed with pencil in the air and a look of pleasure at the river, for further information.

"Daysey Mayme lost a nineteen-dollar hat in that river when we were crossing it last year," said Lysander John, "and we never got it back."

A plaza was pointed out to her where the wind had blown Chauncey Depew's hat into a watering trough. After a ride of four miles, in silence, she was shown a spot that had caught and torn off Mrs. Appleton's veil, and then a little further on she was told to look at a certain grassy spot.

"That," said Daysey Mayme, "is where we stopped for lunch one day."

Aunt Cordelia Dazed

Aunt Cordelia Updike clutched her note book tightly in both hands and began to look a little dazed. The landscape flew by so fast that all she saw were flowering melting into trees and trees dotting away in green seas of grass, and whenever the machine slowed down long enough to raise blots before her vision assume definite shape she was told that "there we ran out of gasoline" or "there the wind shield broke" or "there the lights went out."

"There are historic spots around her. I don't doubt," she wrote back to her literary club sisters, "but they are rapidly floating out of memory on a sea of gasolene."

CHASE & SANBORN'S HIGH GRADE TEAS & COFFEES

A Self-Supporting Wife

By WINIFRED BLACK

MY DEAR WINIFRED BLACK:

Here's the situation in a nutshell. Nice years ago I married a travelling man. I was a stenographer. My husband is good hearted, easy-going and extravagant. Bills don't bother him. They worry me to death. He has never taken care of me as he should; he will buy me nice hunches when he is in town, and silk stockings, and things like that, but he will not pay bills I am compelled to contract for necessities, such as board, etc. So I went to work again. Every once in a while he gets in a dreadful hole and then depends upon me to pull him out. I've been doing this, but this last time it necessitated going to my employer and asking for a big raise more than my husband returned in me only a few dollars of that loan, although I borrowed it nearly three months ago, and he knows I have nothing but a nominal salary to live on and save that money out of. And he told me when I borrowed it that I could promise my employer I would return the money to him at the rate of at least $50 per month.

I was told my husband he doesn't need to come home again until he has paid all of this bill, and until he is ready and able to take care of a wife. He seems very much better over this, but doesn't seem able to realize that he should do these things without their being demanded of him. I really don't think he will ever do better, unless, perhaps, he does settle down in one town, and I am thinking seriously of making this a condition of his coming back to me, and giving him until January I next to do this in. Isn't much as I wouldn't dare give up my position for a while, at least, and wouldn't care to do so until I had a few dollars put aside for any possible need in the future. I am a little puzzled to know whether I would be justified in asking this of him, as he has always been a good man. Will you please advise through the columns of your paper?

A PUZZLED WIFE.

A PUZZLED WIFE: Puzzled? I should think you would be puzzled. I'd be a good deal more than puzzled if I had a husband like that.

I don't think you ought to give up his good position in the hope that he will settle down and be honest, and decent, and square, when he is living in one town all the time, in spite of the fact that he is dishonest and selfish and careless to the verge of criminality when he is travelling!

No, I don't think you ought to do any such thing. A man's business is his business. He might be very successful travelling and a complete failure at home. Let him stick to the work he understands and the work he can do. But if you ever lend him another penny to pull him out of one of the "holes" into which he loves to fall you are a woman of very little common sense.

I think, as a rule, it is a very great mistake for a woman to work for money when her husband is able to support her. Most men dislike a woman who supports herself and helps them.

Perhaps this ought not to be true, but I believe it is true.

I think even the generous, good-humored men turn into small-minded, selfish tyrants by the mere fact that their wives went to work to earn money to help them out of some temporary difficulty. It takes a man of great generosity of character to accept help from a woman and keep from feeling her every time the very sight of her reminds him of his debt to her.

Until you pay back the money you have borrowed from your employer of course you are in a measure helping. Until that matter is settled I should force my husband to pay my expenses, turn in the most of my weekly salary to my employer and get out of debt.

How can you force him? Don't pay your expenses yourself; tell the people to whom he owes that money will see that he pays it.

When you are once more on your feet you can use your own discretion about supporting yourself.

If you do work and earn the money for your own living keep it, and don't let that foolish, selfish, unappreciative husband of yours have a penny of it on any excuse or any pretense whatsoever.

Your husband is not thoughtless, he is simply selfish, he knows very well exactly what he is with you because it pleases him to do so, not because you want the things.

Here, is he, because you expect him to take care of you as any honest man should take care of his wife? Well I'm afraid I'd be "hard" if I were you, and had to make allowances for such a very peculiar husband with such a very irregular point of view.

BRILLIANTLY EXPENSIVE

So you've employed the most expensive soloists you could find for your musicale?

"Yes," replied Mr. Cumrox. "Mother and the girls insisted on it. I don't know whether their idea was to show that we do care for art or that we don't care for money."

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the New Drug

An eminent skin specialist recently discovered a new drug, othine—double strength, which is so uniformly successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion, that is sold by Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co., under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first night's use will show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely. It is absolutely harmless, and cannot injure the most tender skin.

Be sure to ask Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co. for the double-strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

MRS. HIBBARD MAKES STAGE HIT

Widow of Former Mayor Has Successful Debut at the Majestic.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The casual visitor at the Majestic Theatre last evening would have taken Mrs. George A. Hibbard, widow of a former mayor of Boston, for the star of the performance. Her behavior of stock theatre audiences is always friendly, but the big audience that jammed the Majestic last evening gave such unmistakable signs of its approval of Mrs. Hibbard as an actress that Miss Gordon and Mr. Melrose, while outwardly reserved, retired good-naturedly to second place and contented themselves with the knowledge that no matter what happened their names had the conspicuous, bold type on the printed program. For this particular occasion there was glory enough to share.

It was apparent at a glance that Mrs. Hibbard knew what she was doing when she moved abruptly from domestic to professional life, and she simply justified Manager Morrison's conviction that he could believe world of the stage she was fully able to take care of herself in the breezy, if not respectable, role of Sylvia Simpson, the over-dressed show girl in "The Country Lady." While her surroundings may have been strange, Mrs. Hibbard applied herself to the task like a veteran and stamped herself on the big scene in the second act with out flinching.

Deluged with Flowers.

Her first performances made it plain to all that she had both skill and courage, which may have surprised those who expected she would make hard work of the trying situations. But her conquest was complete and she made the hit of the night was delugged with flowers.

In presenting James Forbes' "The Chorus Lady," Mr. Morison again made his own position secure to Boston playgoers. They are now doubtless convinced of the fact that Summer stock entertainments may be taken seriously and that they can find first performance anywhere in stock. "The Chorus Lady," as played by Miss Gordon's company, left nothing to be desired. Not even that author himself could improve at the handling of his play, and with a production that was as elaborate as it was new, Mr. Morison's patrons were supplied with an altogether delightful evening.

That Miss Gordon should have so completely absorbed the character of Patricia O'Brien as to sink her own identity in the rough and ready chorus girl is strong evidence of her ability as an actress. Her struggles to keep her immortal ether on the straight path in spite of the pitfalls that are popularly supposed to exist in stage life, and her own sacrifice in the effort, was sympathetic, and it was human. Miss Gordon never forgot the girl she was portraying, and she was equally at home in the merry moments of the play as when things took a serious turn.

Entire Performance Smooth.

Valerie Valaire was the innocent sister with a grim determination to see the world and enjoy its sweetness. What she got, however, was bitterness. Her performance was more than agreeable. Wilson Melrose, in the role of Dan Mallory, managed himself cleverly and kept clear of difficulties, while William Ingersoll as Jack about town, acted up to the popular idea of the character.

The entire performance ran smoothly, and if you can believe what you see it was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. That Mr. Morison should have done so well with a play presenting so many hard problems for a stock production entitles him to a large measure of credit, and there is no doubt that Mr. Morison's machinery at the Majestic Theatre is in splendid running shape.

Castle Square

As revised by the John Craig stock company at the Castle Square, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," with Henrietta Mc Daniel in the title role, is reasserting its right to be classed as one of the strongest and sweetest plays ever written around a child's life. It is a play that belongs to the "grown-ups" as to the children themselves. This was evidenced by the numerous curtain calls at the close of the performance last night. A feature of the production is the appearance of Joseph Mc Manus as Thomas Jefferson Hobbs, the impersonation of Peter in the "End of the Bridge" by the same player. The ability to look for something beyond the ordinary in this play. Tues were not disappointed. As Cedric Errol in New York, a lovable boy of all who come in contact with him, from the organ grinder down to the bootblack, until when he finds the Lord Fauntleroy he has suffered the affections of his stern old grandfather, the Earl of Dorincourt. Miss Mc Daniel gives the part the endearing attraction of real childhood.

George Hassell in the role of the Earl of Dorincourt was splendid. Thomas Mc Donald Meek as Mr. Hobbs, the grocer, was uproariously funny. And Gertrude Binder put just the right shade of sweetness and refinement in the part of Mrs. Errol. Others in the cast were Mabel Colcord as Minna, Kate Ryan as Dearsley, Lewis Martin as Mr. Mordaunt, Cyril Biddulph as Hutchins, the butler, with Bert Cook, Frank Dietz, and A. L. Hickey in minor roles, all contributed much to the success of the production.

Lottery Man."

A farce, will be the attraction next week.

Keith's.

Consul the Great, the man-monkey, or monkey man, whichever you choose, tops the bill at Keith's this week. Consul, according to his keeper, can do about everything any ordinary person can do except talk. He sits at a table and goes through a dinner from soup to nuts as well as any man about town. Nothing on the menu is overlooked. He drinks wine and coffee, smokes cigarettes and plays the piano to pick. His table manners are perfect. Consul can roller skate some, but on the bicycle he is to be seen at his best.

Jerome Simpson, the boy pianist, for merly of "Up and Down Broadway," appears in a sketch called "Opening Night," and it is. They have the best line of songs they ever sang. Kelly and Drew come to here from the West with an original line of eccentric character comedy. Sergeant Brennan shows what an artist can do in the diabolin game. "Duffy's Rise." Intro ducing Jimmy J. Lewis, Joe Wilson and their company, is a twenty-minute sketch that is pretty big. Mr. Wilson, as himself, Lloit and Wagner on the piano bring down the house. Dorlon Brothers have an original acrobatic pantomime in a "Terrible Night." Bruce Duffett gets a lot of fun and music out of his banjo and

FRIARS' TROUPE NEARS BOSTON

Some can almost hear that bunch 'o minstrels men coming down the street right now. Of course, they haven't got as near Boston yet as Saratoga, but they'll be here to-morrow on their own special train.

What minstrels? Fo' goodness sakes, man! You know it's The Friars. Yes sir! They will come to Boston on the big Frolic to-morrow morning and from then on to-morrow afternoon at the Boston Theatre matinee. Then comes the night performance, just the two shows in one fair city. From the way Billy Lothrop and Frank Ferguson are selling tickets at the theatre, you'll be lucky to get your nose inside the door. Better get around and purchase to-day if you hope to see the biggest bunch of stars ever got together under one roof.

Since the Friars went on tour a week ago they have augmented the talent by adding four more Lew Dockstader to the galaxy. He joined 'em Sunday in Chicago. It was a pretty classy chapter, as you understood, but with your Uncle Lew heard in person, he himself volunteered to sing, "Every Little Added to What You Already Have Makes a Little Bit More."

Monday, also, including such famous stage celebrities as George M. Cohan, Gireus, Raymond Hitchcock, William Collier, Julian Eltinge, George Honey, Ben Ryan, Cheyo, and—well, what's the use trying to count 'em? If you must know who else is in the troupe, look at the bills. You won't have time to read all the names if you do look, but then it might make you feel better.

Then, after you have looked, you'll be ready to go over and count out money to be put into the strong box of John Edward Hegerty, the pleasant Irishman who for John Edward is the treasurer of the Friars. He will keep the money. He'll give it to the Friars to help build their new clubhouse in New York.

In Auto World

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Vanderbilt cup contest and the grand prize will unquestionably be held in Savannah next November. The course to be used will be the same course over which the grand prize race was ridden last Fall. The delegation from Savannah, which has been spending some little time in New York city, returned home thoroughly confident of being able to hold the two big prize events of the year in Savannah.

So far as the Motor Cups Holding Company is concerned, the Vanderbilt will likewise be held there, but it will be necessary to receive the support and approval of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association—the chairman of which was at Indianapolis when the Savannah officials and the Motor Cups Holding Company reached a conclusive last week.

In awarding these events to Savannah, the powers that be have done more than the only logical thing left for them to do, especially since the Contest Board has gone on record as saying that it will sanction no road race that is not run on a course over which the races are to be held are patrolled by uniformed and armed troops.

This means that there are only about three places in the country that it will be possible to hold road races this year in Savannah, Elgin and Fairmont Park—and really on a strict interpretation of the law Elgin, Illinois, Fairmount Park would be excluded.

However, the board is willing to accept the substitution of the Fairmont Park police for soldiers.

The holding of the two big events of the year to Savannah means a great deal to the Southern city, and it means a great influx of visitors than ever before and the greatest racing of the year. Savannah certainly earned her right to hold these events, as she has in the past pulled off the best managed road events that have ever been held in this country.

* * *

Under the decision of the Contest Board to grant no sanctions nor road races unless the course is to be patrolled by armed soldiery, it would seem that there is little chance of the big stock car race at Lowell this year.

While it is true that the present Legislature has enacted a measure whereby troops can be used policing the course, the fact remains that these troops must volunteer their services, and it is a question if the State will permit them to use the uniform and equipment of the Commonwealth for what might really be considered private purposes.

Another point, which will unquestionably deprive Lowell of the race, is the apparent lack of interest. John Heintz of Lowell told the writer in Indianapolis that he questioned very much if Lowell would have a road race this year. He said he was trying very hard to induce the Blue Ribbon Automobile Association to take hold of the matter, and he felt that if it would do so a big event could readily be arranged.

* * *

The future of the Glidden tour is very much in doubt. The Contest Board has postponed the event until late in the Fall, but what attitude will be taken by this postponement by the makers remains to be seen.

It is to be hoped that the tour will not be entirely abandoned, as it is of inestimable value to the trade as a whole—even though it has in the past brought about more or less difference of opinion.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STEEL STOCKS WORRY MARKET

NEW YORK, June 6.—A wavering tendency in United States Steel and the railroads and strength in New York tractions due to the proposed subway situation were the features of the market, which opened to-day with an embracing tone of irregularity.

The London market was again open after an extended holiday and Americans were good enough to take both from home orders and others called from New York. Interborough Metropolitan Traction advanced above one point in the first few minutes of trading on the strength of a possibly easy settlement of contracts for new subway construction. InterMet. common gained 2%. After fluctuating opened with 18 points gain a recession of ⅝ followed. The railroad list generally followed the lead. Of course, A report that the Morgan group was interested in the bull movement which has followed the Standard Oil decision had little effect.

There was fair initial support of the copper shares, Amalgamated opening ½ up and American Smelting up ¼. Union Pacific moved in above last night's close, although the report that James J. Hill was a heavy buyer of this issue was not generally credited. Mr. Hill's recent public announcement that he intended to retire soon.

Southern Pacific was off ⅝. Southern Railway opened unchanged. Canadian Pacific showed its usual strength, opening with an advance of ¾. Erie was off ⅛; Reading ⅜ up. Selling orders crowded during the initial gains caused recessions. The stock market quieted fairly active. American Tobacco showed a slightly better tone.

Americans after advancing on the London exchange suffered recessions under realizing. Canadian Pacific was strong. Mexicans were weak.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The market is not so apt to decline on bad news, or what the bears think is bad, and often stands firm in the face of what, but a short time since, would be worth several points to those on the short side.

$ $ $

It has been noted by those who trade actively in the Street that stocks go up much more easily than they go down, and that the line of least resistance is upward. The purchase of 1,000 shares is more effective than the sale of 10,000. The feeling on the floor of the Stock Exchange is not nearly so pessimistic as it was a few weeks ago.

$ $ $

It is easy enough to see that bonds will not sell well when the stock market is acting badly, but at the same time if fundamentals were sound and the prospect for the future not bright the market would not go up. State Street looks ahead, at least stocks do, and it is this authority which makes prices for the time things at the moment are not so encouraging as they might be.

$ $ $

There may be some delay and possibly a few difficulties encountered before the plan for the rearrangement of the affairs of the American Tobacco Company can be worked out, but it is not forgotten that it is sufficient that the courts have a regard for the interest of the public and the trade, and will not propose to do anything that will vitiate them. The object is not to destroy the creation of corporate conditions which shall be in full harmony with the sherman anti-trust law.

$ $ $

The only thing against the stock market just now is the fact that rain is needed in the crop belt to the south and cotton is poor. Some rain is falling in these places, and the general condition of the weather is such as to justify the expectation of more immediately. With good rains the market will revive.

$ $ $

Heavy rains in Winnipeg during the past fortnight have placed the Canadian wheat crop on a highly satisfactory basis. [011] Another appeal will have to be made in order for crop purposes. Wheat is in excellent condition and although the heavy rains have held back planting oats and barley are now seeding. The cotton belt is in good condition now, and all seeding operations have been completed.

$ $ $

The theory that Hill and his friends are about to take a leading position in the managements of the Pacific is not entertained among the insiders of the Hill or Harriman camps. Nobody has arisen since Harriman's death to take his position. The Morgan group has very large owned interests in the Pacific roads, and they have been accumulating holdings constantly for some time. They took a great deal from July 1 and their brokers have been aggressive buyers of Union Pacific since the Standard Oil decision was announced.

$ $ $

George F. Baker, Morgan's banking partner, is in Europe with a paying movement in Union Pacific brooks out where he is. A combination of interests including the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Burlington, Pacific Coast systems would be entirely legal, and would need no meeting of the courts to put it through. Important readjustments although there is a well-defined rumor that the St. Paul is to announce soon that it has purchased the property, but Pigtail's policy is understood to be a good thing for St. Paul, in the twelve months ending June 1, Erie is understood to have earned 2.84 per cent. on its common stock after providing for all of its charges.

$ $ $

Since the rendering of the Supreme Court decisions in the Oil and Tobacco cases, the stocks of both of these companies has displayed weakness, due to selling by persons who had invested their money in these securities while the stock market was dull, but who are now getting into stocks. Because of the selling, high-grade short-term notes have declined an average of ¼ of a point.

$ $ $

Should the Great Northern buy the Northern Pacific's equity in the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy it would not be a bad bargain for the seller. The equity value, $30,000,000, is equal to $13 a share on the stock. The shares of the Northern Pacific are very well protected by trackage rights which they could use the Burlington system for Chicago entrance as freely as before.

$ $ $

Bullish gossip is found in a number of conservative offices regarding Rock Island preferred and also the common stock. It is said the floating supply of both securities has been heavily reduced during the past few months. The better control over expenses has excited foreign interest, it is said.

$ $ $

A Toronto wire says: The railway now building from Cochrane to Golden City is expected to be completed to Lake Superior by June 15, and from there worked pushed on to Hollinger.

$ $ $

Thomas W. Lawson quietly slipped out of Boston a week ago to visit his recently married daughter in Washington State [012] Lawson contemplated being away three weeks.

$ $ $

Nevada Douglas stockholders were asked to subscribe for another 60,000 shares [013] at $1 per share. This money will clean up all of the company's indebtedness. This should be underwritten without commissions or discounts.

The Arrogant Lumber and Paper Trusts Cannot Bamboozle the American Farmer

The selfish and greedy combinations of capital that are fighting so fiercely the Canadian Reciprocity pact are fighting, as usual, by subterfuge and indirection.

The duplicity of the Paper, Lumber and Woolen trusts in putting forward Allen and Graham, two regular New York publicity agents, to fight the measure before the Finance Committee of the Senate, has been exposed.

It is exactly in the same spirit of arrant hypocrisy that their greedy combines have MANAGED TO USE A FEW FARMERS AND FARMER SPOKESMEN TO MAKE IT APPEAR THAT THE GREAT FARMING INTEREST OF THE COUNTRY WAS OPPOSED TO RECIPROCITY.

THE ALLEGATION IS AS FALSE AS IT IS UNFAIR.

The farmers of the country have no reason to oppose Reciprocity with Canada, but every reason in interest to advocate it.

The combined trusts are making desperate efforts to deceive the farmer, as they have deceived him before. They have bamboozled some of the farmer newspapers and bought others to advocate their selfish policy. They argue to the farmer that by reason of the present Canadian tariff he gets more than the fair market price for his products. THIS IS FALSE. The Canadian tariff operates against our farmer products. Our tariff operates against the Canadian farmer. It is the object of Reciprocity to give both farmer products an even chance in both countries. Let us see the facts:

In five years ending June 30, in goods of all kinds—
We sold in Canada.....$866,417,376
Canada sold to us..... 393,913,673
Difference in our favor.....$492,503,703

These figures show that Canada is a good country for us to trade with. Any country which buys from us more than it sells to us is a good country to trade with. No tariff wall should stand between us and such a country.

Government statistics show the American farmer that for five years ending June 30—
We sold in Canada (horses)..$14,172,075
Canada sold to us (horses).. 2,549,201
Difference in our favor.....$11,622,874
We sold in Canada (cattle).. $1,578,179
Canada sold to us (cattle).. 1,193,796
Difference in our favor..... $384,383
In meat and dairy—
We sold in Canada.....$17,011,017
Canada sold to us..... 904,191
Difference in our favor.....$16,106,826
In breadstuffs—
We sold in Canada.....$31,596,556
Canada sold to us..... 6,679,884
Difference in our favor.....$24,916,672
Of these items, which are standard among farmers, we sold to Canada $53,030,755 more than Canada sold to us.

Upon these articles we had to pay the Canadian tariff. But for this Canadian tariff our balance on these items would have been still larger. Reciprocity would relieve us from that hindrance to our trade. How, then, could Reciprocity hurt the farmer?

Judge Gary Becomes as "Radical" as Mr. Hearst

A critical event in the economic history of the United States took place on Friday last.

Judge Gary, chief executive officer of the United States Steel Corporation, told a committee of the House of Representatives that big business in this country has reached a point of development that puts effective competition out of the question; that, therefore, the competitive method must be given up, so far as great corporations like the Steel Trust are concerned, and A NEW POLICY OF COMPLETE GOVERNMENTAL CONTROL MUST BE ACCEPTED.

Judge Gary speaks not for himself alone, but for the most highly organized industrial corporation in the world—and not only for that corporation, but for all corporations of a similar character. His words will, no doubt, be repudiated in some quarters, but they are likely to stand as generally representative of the views of the more enlightened big business men.

Thus the event of Friday amounts to a capitulation. The best opinion among the great corporation managers has come over to the position so long occupied by the AMERICAN. THE RADICALISM OF JUDGE GARY NOW EXACTLY EQUALS THE RADICALISM OF MR. HEARST—the truth being, of course, that this common radicalism is a doctrine of sound conservatism, since it points the only open way to industrial peace and the orderly development of great business affairs.

Four months ago the AMERICAN gave place to an announcement by Mr. Andrew Carnegie which put the great ironmaster in agreement with the editorial policy of the AMERICAN on the subject of trust regulation.

Mr. Carnegie at that time agreed with the AMERICAN that the principle of public regulation must be applied to the great "industrial" trusts—Steel, Oil, Sugar, etc.—quite as thoroughly as to the railroads; that such regulation will inevitably include price-fixing and the legal limiting of dividends, and that these changes will come about through the evolution of the new Commerce Court, an institution first projected and planned by Mr. Hearst as a member of the Fifty-eighth Congress.

Judge Gary says: "I believe the Sherman act does not now, and never will, fully prevent the organizing of the great combinations of capital. I BELIEVE WE MUST COME TO ENFORCED PUBLICITY AND GOVERNMENTAL CONTROL OF CORPORATIONS. YES, EVEN AS TO PRICES. * * * I WISH WE COULD GO TO SOME RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENTAL SOURCE * * * AND COULD BE TOLD JUST WHAT PRICES WE COULD CHARGE—AND JUST WHAT WE COULD DO."

This deliverance is, indeed, an extraordinary event.

AND IT IS AN EVENT OF THE HAPPIEST OMEN FOR THE PROSPERITY OF THE COUNTRY.

No Mystery Is Too Baffling for Him

It's "Fierce" How Few Adjectives Girls Use Nowadays

If a Thing Isn't "Cute" or "Grand" It's Simply "Swell"; A Woful Lack of Descriptive Power Revealed by the Talk of Modern Girl Graduates.

By DOROTHY DIX

A GREAT deal is said, from time to time, about the needs of our public schools.

So far as I am able to judge, their most pressing and immediate necessity is a couple of tons of assorted adjectives, and somebody to teach the pupils how to apply them with some kind of discretion in the places where they will do the most good.

It is my happy privilege to be acquainted with a number of young girls who are high school graduates, and to listen to their effervescing conversation. It is vastly entertaining, as well as a liberal education, to sit at the feet of these fledglings, and get their queer, clear, unsophisticated, blase, ultra modern views on world-old problems; but beyond the curious blending of infantile ignorance and septuagenarian knowledge they display, the most interesting thing is their utter poverty in the matter of adjectives.

So far as I am able to discover, the young person of to-day starts out in life with only four. These are, "cute," and "grand," and "swell" and "fierce;" and these are used interchangeably, and without any sense of value.

Thus the Public Library building is cute. So is the statue of Leif Erickson. So are the works of art in the Art Museum. So is Mr. Taft. So is a battleship.

A chocolate soda, on the other hand, is grand. A chiffon dress is grand. A comic opera is grand. Revere Beach is grand. Anything and everything is grand that is pleasant and agreeable, but it is just as likely to be cute.

Getting Through Life on a Margin of Four Poor Adjectives

As for "swell," you have, or rather they have, a swell time at a dance, or on an automobile ride, or you have a swell dinner at a restaurant, or you get a swell dress, or have a swell house. Things that cost money are "swell" when they aren't "grand" or "cute." "Fierce" expresses all the gradations of woe from losing all of your nearest relatives to breaking a fan. It also applies to the very quintessence of joy, such as going to the Junior Prom, for instance, in a taxi and having callow youths fight over your dance program.

Apparently Miss Sweet-and-Eighteen gets along with perfect comfort to herself, and intelligibility to her fellows, on this meager equipment of adjectives; but to an older person it is very, very sad to see one so poverty-stricken when there are so many beautiful, expressive, delicately appropriate adjectives still left in the dictionary, and to be had for the taking.

One wishes that parents and teachers thought it worth while to provide young people with a more liberal capital of adjectives upon which to do business in life; for the adjective is not only the foundation stone of conversation, it contains within itself the whole of the art of making friends, or enemies.

"It isn't what 'ee said, it's the naisty way 'ee said it," complained the hero of Chevalier's song about a man who had insulted him; and many another one of us has felt like voicing the same lamentation over an individual who had given unintentional offence. The trouble was that the undiscriminating individual had merely used the wrong adjective.

For there is one particular adjective that is, to each of us, like a red rag to a mad bull, and succors beyond which we melt as wax in the sunshine. And the art of pleasing consists in knowing how to choose the right one.

What a pleasing sentiment, for example, a stout lady entertains toward the individual who speaks of her plumpness, and what burning hatred she forever feels toward the blunderer who calls her fat! How sweet to the ear of the thin woman to be called slender, willowy, or svelt; and how unforgivably offensive to be told that she is scrawny!

How a Family Feud Once Started Over Lack of Adjective

I know of a family feud that had its beginning in a reckless woman, with a limited supply of adjectives, writing to a young mother, who had sent her the picture of a homely baby, "that little Johnny appeared to be a nice, healthy child." But the fond mother would have been overjoyed if her correspondent had said that little Johnny was a remarkably interesting child.

What a difference it makes whether you call a snub nose a pug nose, or speak of it as a tip-tilted nose, or a retrousse nose!

Who would not be furious at being labeled sallow, and who would not gurgle with delight at being described as having an olive complexion!

What woman would not resent being called ash colored, but beam with joy at being referred to as a pale silver blonde!

Yet all these ways of putting it mean the same thing. The difference lies in the adjective.

There are those who think that all flattery is a sweet morsel that we roll under our tongues. Perhaps. But the flavor of it depends on the choice of the adjective. Which one of us has not felt like braining some murderer who handed us the wrong adjective when we panted so after the right one?

Be sure the woman who devotes her life to studying the fashions doesn't want to be told that she is "good." She pines to be called "smart." Nor does the man who succeeds in business feel overjoyed at being praised as "industrious." He yearns to be called a "financier."

Adjectives in Thy Mouth Beat Money in Thy Purse

It makes you mad, through and through, to paint a picture as black as tragedy itself and have some idiot call it "pretty;" and it breaks your heart when you have poured out your whole soul in some story that you think gets down below the skin and grips the soul to have your friends tell you it is "sweet."

And so it goes. The average person has scarcely a speaking acquaintance with half a dozen adjectives. Yet if I were giving advice to any boy or girl starting out in life I should say, put adjectives in the mouth. They will carry you further than will scrip in thy purse.

The Red Corpuscle

THE GAME FOR THE CUP.

CAREFULLY counting over his money, young Percy Pippin shook his head sadly.

He had been invited to play for the Noddle Island team in the great polo contest of the age.

All over the world horsemen had their interest centred upon this unparalleled struggle. Cowboys on the ranges of Iowa discussed the chances of the teams. Motormen on the cars stopped their whirring wheels to argue about the probable outcome.

Hundreds of young men would have given anything for the honor of representing their beloved Noddle Island against the invaders.

But Percy Pippin had only $475.-000 available cash. He needed at least as much more.

What was he to do?

He had cut down all possible expenses. His ponies were fed on one oat less than those of any other player.

What was he to do? How was he to meet the difficulty?

He didn't know.

So he gave it up.

THE VOICE IN THE MOUNTAINS.

Another tale of "The Pink Vulture" and the Prince of Airmen.

Sneel leaned down to listen to the noise which arose upon the night air. "Sounds like polar bears fighting," he said to himself. "And if that is the case I am 3,000 miles out of my course."

But Sneel was mistaken. The sounds really came from an excited party of Moorish soldiers, and the Pink Vulture was at the present some quarter of a mile above the beleaguered city of Fez.
